91st YEAR, No. 147 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1974 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

11,000 Jobless, 315 City Jobs

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

There are about 11,000 Victorians looking for work and only 315 jobs listed at the local Canada Manpower office, manager Stan Purdy said today.

This means about 33 people are available to fill every job listed, despite the extra Christmas hiring.

Purdy said the surplus of workers spreads across the board but is especially noted in the service occupations such as waitresses and chambermaids.

"There is no prospects of an immediate improvement and after Christmas it could be pretty grim," he said.

However, the unemployment rate for the Victoria area is holding slightly under the British Columbia average at about 6 per cent.

Purdy said the Victoria economy continues to fare better than elsewhere on the Island where forest industry layoffs have taken a heavy toll.

For example, the unemployment level for the Sooke-Jordan River area is estimated to be about 12 per cent because of a layoff of loggers and a cutback in supporting occupations such as trucking.

In Victoria, the total number of forest industry layoffs is 650, with 450 out of work at B.C. Forest Products plywood plant and mill and another 200 out at Victoria Plywood.

Because Victoria is a commercial centre for all of the south Vancouver Island region, the layoffs are causing concern for local merchants.

Purdy said some major department stores and appliance dealers are being more selective in their credit policies.

(Department store officials said credit decisions were being made on an individual basis and persons laid off often are still eligible for credit. A cutback in credit was normal when unemployment was on the increase.)

Pre-Christmas sales were reported to be very brisk despite the economic downturn in British Columbia. Victoria merchants reported that some toy items had already been sold out.

Purdy said merchants continued to be optimistic at this time, although there was some concern about conditions in January, after the annual Yuletide buying spree.

He stressed that Victoria continues to have a solid economic base because of the large number of people employed in the civil service where layoffs are unlikely.

"Victoria will continue to do better than the provincial average and much better than the Island as a whole, which relies heavily upon the forest industry."

While there was a surplus of workers in most occupations, there are jobs available for engineers, automobile salesmen and draftpersons.

Jobs are also posted for sales clerks, day workers and baby sitters.

Purdy was commenting on the monthly economic report compiled by John Atcheson of the local Canada Manpower office.

The report shows 140 jobs listed at the main office, another 45 at the industrial employment office and 130 federal and provincial government jobs; for a total of 315.

This is down from an all-time high of just over 1,000 in September.

The report shows local foundries, machine shops and metal fabricating plants remain fairly busy at this time but there is concern about possible cutbacks after Christmas as a delayed reaction to layoffs in the forest industry.

Construction is slowing down in the Victoria area and the demand for workers is very light. A construction slowdown is normal at this time of year.

Real estate sales were off in October and appear to have been down rather sharply in November, according to a preliminary estimate, the Canada Manpower report says.

Rental accommodation continues in very short supply and lower and moderately-priced apartment units are almost non-existent.

Mortgage companies continue to be very selective in granting loans.

The current interest rate for first mortgages in the core area is 12 per cent and second mortgages range from 15 to 18 per cent, depending upon the buyer's equity in the house and his credit rating.

Outside the core area on unsewered property, first mortgages range from 13 to 15 per cent and second mortgages are listed as high as 21 per cent, depending upon the buyer's credit rating.

Harvesting of vegetable crops is just being completed. The annual holly crop harvest is under way with between 40 and 50 people employed.

Most of the workers are housewives who come back year after year for this type of seasonal employment.

The fish packing plant has cut back its operations as usual for the winter season with only a minimum staff to process drag fish and to assist in moving to a new processing plant.

Oakland Industries will be moving to its new facilities at 630 Montreal from its present plant at 1306 Wharf.

ARSON BLAMED

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — Fires in three city apartment blocks broke simultaneously about 3 a.m. today with no reports of injuries so far, RCMP in this community, about 200 miles southeast of Saskatoon, said.

Two of the apartment blocks have collapsed. Police said officials suspect arson in one of the fires.

Israel, Egypt Toss N-Bomb Threats

Times News Services

Egypt today claimed that it has the potential and the right to build nuclear weapons. The statement, by Egyptian ambassador to England Sa'ad Elshazly, also included a comment that he felt another Mideast war is inevitable.

It came in the wake of Israeli claims Monday that Israel has "the potential to build nuclear weapons and will do so if needed."

Answering questions of an international science reporters' group in Tel Aviv President Ephraim Katzier repeatedly refused to say just how far Israeli scientists have gone along the road to nuclear capabilities. He said Israel does not have such weapons today but could produce them "within a reasonable period of time."

"If necessary, Israel will protect herself by all means possible," he emphasized.

"I think there will be another war because you see there is a minimum which we can accept," Elshazly told a television interviewer.

"And, if they don't concede to this minimum then war is inevitable."

Shazly, who commanded Egyptian forces in the October 1973 Middle East war, said Egypt had nuclear capabilities but had never thought of converting them to armed capabilities until the Israel announcement.

Israel today accused Egypt of digging "earth channels" on the east bank of the Suez canal and said they were the kind used for launching missiles.

A military spokesman said Israel filed a complaint with the United Nations Emergency Force and that UN observers have sent a team to check the area.

There was no immediate comment from Egyptian or UN officials.

Foreign observers have believed since the mid-1960s that the Israelis were able to produce atomic bombs and warheads if the government decided they were necessary.

But Katzir was the first high-ranking Israeli official to confirm this.

Tel Aviv has said repeatedly that it would not be the first government to introduce nuclear weapons into the Middle East, and Katzir repeated this pledge.

TURNPIKE TRAFFIC near Bedford, Pa., grinds to a halt in the blizzards that stranded 35,000 people in several U.S. states (see story page 2). A newspaper truck at left is almost obscured by the snow that fell to depths of more than a foot in many areas.

$3,000 RING AND WATER PLEASE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are holding a man who they believe swallowed a $3,000 ring in a theft at a jewelry store Monday.

A police spokesman said the 26-year-old man asked to see the ring and a clerk put it on the counter. The clerk turned away and when she looked back the ring was gone.

The man said the ring might have fallen to the floor and he and another clerk searched around the counter. During the hunt the man complained of a dry throat and asked for a drink of water.

Police were called and the customer submitted to a search in a back room. But he refused to be X-rayed.

$600,000 Grant For Law Library

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The B.C. Law Foundation has granted $600,000 to the University of Victoria's fledgling law faculty for the purchase of law library books.

The grant will be made in equal installments of $150,000 a year for the next four years and will "ease the burden considerably" of setting up the library, UVic Dean of Law Murray Fraser said today.

"It's a magnificent gift that gives us a guaranteed income that enables us to plan our acquisition policy," Fraser said.

Cost estimates for a "modest law library" for teaching and limited research are about $1.5 million, Fraser said. The provincial government has made contributions towards that amount and other contributions and budgetary funds will make up the total.

The dean said he hopes the estimated 67 to 70 first class students for the faculty of law who arrive in September, 1975 will have a library with about 20,000 volumes.

"Those are really the basics and are barely enough."

He said the minimum libary volume figure established for law schools is 65,000 and that a law school such as Queen's in Kingston, Ont., which has been in existence for 15 years, has a library of 99,000 volumes.

Fraser said he thought the grant from the Law Foundation was a "vote of confidence" in the faculty and the university.

The B.C. Law Foundation was set up five years ago and makes grants in the fields of legal aid, education, research and law reform.

The foundation's funds are derived from the interest from trust funds which are administered by lawyers in the province.

U.K. Slashes Defence

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced today plans for an $11.2-billion cut in defence spending during the next 10 years, intended particularly to reduce commitments east of Suez.

But Defence Secretary Roy Mason, announcing the results of a nine-month review of defence policy in the House of Commons, called the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "the linchpin of British security" and said NATO "will remain the first charge on the resources available for defence."

U.S. Plans Gold Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will sell two million ounces of gold, valued officially at $84.4 million, from its government-held gold reserves, Treasury Secretary William Simon said today.

Simon also said the government will not ask for a postponement of the right for Americans to buy gold after Dec. 31.

He said the government gold will be sold at a public auction on Jan. 6.

The price of gold slumped more than $6 an ounce on European bullion markets today following the U.S. announcement.

NEWS BRIEFS

Picket Violence

WINNIPEG (CP) — Police were called on today to intervene in the second outbreak of violence in less than a week at the strike-bound Flyer Industries Ltd. plant. About 15 uniformed police, some armed with riot sticks, were summoned to hold back a crowd of striking workers and supporters who attempted to halt traffic into the plant.

The brief flare-up occurred shortly after police ushered management personnel's cars through the picket line.

Auto Firms Backed

PARIS (UPI) — France backed up a sweeping overhaul of the country's ailing automobile industry today with a $290 million government loan.

Ambulance Moves

SETON PORTAGE (CP) — Agreement has been made to use an emergency rail ambulance that was halted by the B.C. railway strike. Residents in remote communities have been without rail ambulances since Nov. 21 when 550 members of five shopcraft unions went on strike, halting all rail service.

Oil Fine $1,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro and Imperial Oil Ltd. were each fined $1,000 Monday following their conviction on a charge of dumping oil into waters frequented by fish. The incident occurred Nov. 5 when between 1,000 and 1,200 gallons of fuel oil overflowed from a tank at a downtown bus depot and flowed into Burrard Inlet through storm sewers.

Hijacker Silent

SASKATOON (CP) — Naim Djemal, charged in connection with the hijacking of a CP Air jetliner last week, was remanded without election or pleas to Wednesday when he appeared in magistrate's court today. Djemal, a 30-year-old native of Cyprus and resident of Winnipeg, said today he had decided to get the advice of a lawyer.

STRIKE SPARKS BREADLINES

Times News Services

LONDON — Bread disappeared from shelves across Britain today on the first day of a bakers' union strike that reduced supplies by 80 per cent.

"Housewives have gone crazy," said the secretary of the National Consumer Protection Council today. "They are going from shop to shop buying up all the bread they can lay their hands on."

By midmorning, most shops in London had run out of bread as 33,000 bakery workers in England and Wales struck for higher pay. The strike closed bakeries that supply three-quarters of the bread in the two regions.

Leaders of the member Bakers' Union, demanding a 66 per cent pay raise and four weeks' annual vacation, vowed to stay out indefinitely.

"There will be some bread here and there today, but tomorrow our action will really bite," Bakers Union general secretary Stan Gretton said. "We are prepared to stay out indefinitely. It is up to the employers now."

Union leaders and employers were meeting with officials of the conciliation and arbitration service in a bid to resolve the strike.

Small independent bakers were not affected. One of them in East London, Ian Kilbey, said he baked three times his normal production Monday, opened his shop at 7 a.m. and had lines of customers until closing time.

Bread Shortages Feared for East

OTTAWA (CP) — Bread, pasta and flour shortages are a strong possibility in Eastern Canada this winter if wheat does not start moving soon from Thunder Bay.

"We have only 50 per cent of our winter requirements in eastern positions," said J. F. Blakney, chairman of the Canadian National Millers Association.

"The other 50 per cent is at Thunder Bay or back of there."

The association represents 16 companies who process 99 per cent of the country's flour needs.

Blakney said the shortage would be due to the strike by Great Lakes ships' officers in August and September and the walkout by 222 grain inspectors Nov. 23.

The grain inspectors walkout came when the federal government failed to negotiate a contract settlement with the primary product inspectors, who check food for quality and purity.

Blakney said Monday the railways would not be able to move the grain eastward because of the volume, the shortage of rail cars and the winter in Northern Ontario.

Even if grain movements are resumed in the next few days, there will be shortages this winter, Blakney predicted.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand, asked in the Commons if there is a contingency plan to move grain, said only that it would not be in the public interest to reveal plans at this stage.

Meanwhile in Winnipeg, the president of United Grain Growers (UGG) today said the federal government should immediately order striking grain inspectors at Thunder Bay to return to work until the close of navigation.

A. M. Runciman said the UGG was not asking that all 220 grain inspectors on strike across Canada be ordered back to work—only the 100 at Thunder Bay.

He said ships will have to leave Thunder Bay before Dec. 10 if they are to get through the seaway locks at Lake Ontario that are set to close Dec. 14.

In Moose Jaw, Public Service Alliance (PSA) pickets turned back a Canadian Pacific Railway train at 11 p.m. Monday at the Canadian government elevators.

Wally Glockler, Saskatchewan representative of the PSA, said the union had heard rumors of 25 empty grain cars due for arrival at the elevators.

Timing 'Critical' in Trudeau Meeting With Ford

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The visit of Prime Minister Trudeau over the next two days comes at a critical time in Canada-U.S. relations.

Two highly-publicized recent issues have served to focus U.S. interest on the talks Trudeau will have with President Ford on Wednesday and promise to make his press conference the following day a lively one.

These are oil and beef.

But it is expected that the main topic will be much broader — what's known as "the big picture," especially the economic picture as it affects two neighbors who are each other's biggest customers.

For some time there has been concern here about what is often called "growing nationalism" in Canada.

There are those who react strongly and bitterly to recent Canadian policies, a number of people in Congress, for instance.

But official policy, as much as it touches on Canada, in the state department and White House, has tended to react much more gently.

To a certain extent the same thing has been happening in Canada.

Ford, however, is getting a loud message from his old buddies in Congress. Essentially it is to take a tougher line and press Trudeau for some concessions on oil supply.

Trudeau will get a chance to discuss this issue privately on Thursday, when he is invited to breakfast with 10 members of the U.S. senate.

While the state department has been cautious not to antagonize Canada since the announcement that oil exports would be phased out by the early 1980s, it must be remembered that Ford is highly susceptible to the opinions of his congressional friends.

However, against this is the possibility that Ford will act impulsively and without particular attention to the advice he receives in the pre-meeting briefings which he is now getting.

There are, of course, many other bilateral issues which are outstanding, such as foreign investment screening, the auto pact, Canadian tax policy toward U.S. magazines, a half-dozen environmental questions ranging from East Coast tankers to the Great Lakes clean-up, even worries about Canadian restrictions on U.S. football teams.

The over-riding concern in both countries at present is unquestionably the economy in general. Ford and U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger will be interested in getting an insight on how Canada intends to cope with the slide from inflation into recession.

Given the immense influence of U.S. economic policy on Canada, Trudeau will want to find out what Ford intends to do — an enigma still to the American people and perhaps even to Ford himself.

Storms Strand 35,000 in U.S.

Times News Services

The wintry blast that gripped southwestern Ontario Monday, disrupting everything from municipal elections, (See results on Page 7.) to police spot-checks, appeared to be on the wane today, but in the U.S. a storm that carried its fury from the midwest to the east coast has left more than 35,000 persons stranded.

Michigan officials called the snow storm the worst since 1886, National Guard heavy equipment was mobilized in western Maryland and several communities were virtually isolated in Pennsylvania.

The story was the same in parts of Ohio, West Virginia and Virginia.

Today's forecast for most of Ontario is for cold but generally clear weather.

Essex County, hit hardest by snow and freezing rain, had to extend several municipal elections over two days and postpone others for 24 hours.

But the storm was good news for some motorists in the Metropolitan Toronto area. Metro police decided the elements were too rough for them to kick off their annual Christmas spot-check campaign.

They'll try again tonight.

The storm started in the Windsor area Sunday, leaving more than a foot of snow there. By Monday afternoon it left a trail of freezing rain and snow from Toronto to Kingston.

In between, thousands of cars were abandoned and hundreds of motorists rescued on snowmobiles and accommodated overnight in police stations, schools and service stations.

The American Red Cross estimated 35,000 stranded in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and reports indicated thousands more were trapped by snow-blocked highways in other states.

WARM, DULL NOVEMBER

It was warmer, wetter, duller and less windy than normal during November.

The weather office said the mean temperature at Gonzales observatory was 45.8 degrees, up 0.9 from normal, while rainfall was 3.78 inches, up .07.

There were 74.3 hours of bright sunshine, down 6.7 hours from normal, and the mean wind speed was 9.7 miles an hour, down 1.9.

The weather so far this year has been warmer, sunnier, drier and less windy than normal — at the Gonzales observatory.

Computer Lab Tests

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Royal Jubilee Hospital is launching a $521,000 pilot project to speed by computer the massive flow of data from laboratory tests, executive director A. C. Pickles announced today.

The program, paid for by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, is a first in the province and could form a model for other B.C. hospitals.

It will also likely prove a prelude to the ultimate linking of many hospital departments by computer, so technical information on a patient's condition can be flashed almost instantaneously to nursing station or doctor.

The new computer system will serve all parts of Jubilee's giant laboratory, one of the largest hospital labs in Canada, with a staff of about 120 and an operating budget last year of $1.65 million.

Basically it is intended to meet more efficiently the thorny problem of handling the thousands of test results daily flowing from the laboratory's automated instruments.

Dr. Ken Thornton, Jubilee's director of laboratories, said today an estimated 40 per cent of technologists' time is now taken up in handling test results.

The computer will take over most of this work, freeing staff to process more tests. It will also monitor the automated testing instruments, some of which can produce 700 individual tests an hour.

The computer system will produce print-outs of test results, to be moved on to the patient's doctor or to the nursing station. It will also have a built-in checking system to ensure against errors.

Pickles said the five-year project aims at proving computers can handle the test processing cheaper than the added staff which would otherwise be needed and he is confident it will.

The system will not mean the loss of any jobs but should reduce the rate at which staff has had to be expanded in recent years to handle the accelerating work load.

Thornton said the laboratory handled 12 million test units of work last year, up from 9 million in 1972. Staff has been increasing at the rate of about 15 per cent a year.

The hospital has been three years refining its laboratory record system so it can be taken over by the computer. Both Pickles and Thornton paid tribute to co-operation provided by BCHIS, which made the final choice of which computer firm would be hired.

In all, 27 computer manufacturers were contacted and nine submitted bids. Cybermed Corporation of San Francisco was chosen.

CITY BREAK-IN RASH

City police are still investigating three break-ins during the weekend which netted thieves $16,000 worth of goods and cash.

There was little likelihood, police said, that the break-ins were conducted by the same thieves.

Watches, rings and other items worth about $8,000 as well as $450 in cash was stolen from Universal Trading, 584 Johnson. The theft was discovered Saturday.

Items worth $5,300, including a $3,000 sterling silver set, were stolen from a home at 1395 Manor between Friday and Sunday.

Police also said about $1,700 in receipts and another $600 was stolen Sunday from the Meat Market, 535 Yates.

School Funds Up 19.4%

The provincial government will allow school boards an over-all increase of 19.4 per cent for the cost of basic education next year, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Monday.

In a two-pronged move Dailly boosted the value of an instructional unit and announced a one-mill increase to the basic mill rate next year to 25.70.

The value of an instructional unit — the cost of which is shared by the province — is boosted to $1,985 for next year, an increase of just over $3,000 from last year's $16,900 rate.

An instructional unit is classified as 25 elementary or 20 secondary students.

Based on a review of provisional budgets for 1975 submitted by school boards across the province, Dailly has calculated the need for an increase of one mill, meaning a hike of $10 to a local taxpayer with property assessed at $10,0000.

Both measures, said Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn, "should help" finance spiralling costs of education.

If school boards spend more than the rate set by the instructional unit education department they are forced to raise the money through local taxes.

Bunn said the moves "will make it a bit better, but I don't know yet whether they will be sufficient to take care of inflation hitting school service costs."

The board chairman said it will be about January before school boards come to any decision on whether to reduce spending levels or "cut back by doing some internal chopping."

He said he'll opt for the budget-cutting measure rather than increasing the taxpayer's financial burden.

Total budget this year for Greater Victoria education is $34,659,372. The board's provisional budget for 1975 shows an increase of about 30 per cent, not including the increase caused by the expected hike in teachers' salaries.

Bunn said it was impossible to estimate just what teachers would win in pay increases.

Courtenay Bridge Blasted

COURTENAY — Timbers were blown out and the blast was heard for at least a mile when a bridge on Headquarters Road was damaged by dynamite early Sunday.

RCMP said the traffic bridge in a rural area near Sandwick School was still useable and there were no reports of injury.

Police are investigating the possibility that explosive used was part of 700 pounds of industrial forcite stolen in the past six weeks from a mine site near Jordan River, or from Buckley Bay last summer. A $1,000 reward has been posted by Armside Mining Ltd. for information leading to arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the theft.

A spokesman said it was difficult to trace explosive after use, but a number of persons had been interviewed.

Telephones to the police station began ringing moments after the blast at 3:45 a.m.

UNNATURAL CAUSES SUSPECTED IN DEATH

A police investigation is being held into the death of Kathleen Arden, 78, whose body was found Saturday in her home at 2807 Sooke Lake Road.

A spokesman for Colwood RCMP said death is suspected to have resulted from other than natural causes but he declined further comment pending completion of a pathologist's report.

A coroner's inquest or inquiry is expected to be held.

the weather

Cloudy conditions prevailed over most of the province early this morning and temperatuses ranged from the low fifties along the west coast of Vancouver Island to the twenties over the central and eastern parts of the province. Precipitation was rather intermittent with some rain along coastal areas and extreme southern B.C. and a few periods of light snow over the remainder of the province.

A disturbance about 300 miles west of Vancouver Island is moving towards the Queen Charlottes and this will result in a relatively moist flow of air over the province. Consequently generally cloudy weather with intermittent precipitation is in store for all of the province today and Wednesday.

Quit. For life.

No one has to tell you smoking is bad for you.

You've heard it from government health agencies, from the Cancer Society, from the Heart Foundation.

You've heard it from your children, your parents, your husband or wife, your friends.

You've heard it from your own body, when you wake up with that dry, burning, bird-cage of a mouth, or that hacking cough; or when your breath comes in pants after just one flight of stairs.

Maybe you've even heard it from your doctor.

No one has to tell you a thing.

But someone has to help you quit.

Our programme is not mysterious. It's not harmful. It does work.

At least talk to us about it.

Loophole Found in Missile Pact

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Ford acknowledged Monday that the tentative new arms accord with Russia does not prevent the U.S. from eventually fielding new and more powerful missiles, if it chooses, to match the lifting power of the big new Russian missiles soon to be deployed.

Ford also seemed to suggest that if the Pentagon felt it has a good idea to build larger missiles, and Congress appropriates the money, he would go along with it. He raised the prospect of newer and bigger missiles in dealing with the complex issue known as "throw-height," a central — and expensive — factor in the arms race that was not settled at Vladivostok.

A missile's "Throw-weight," is the amount of atomic explosive and individual warheads it can hurl at an opponent.

Russians missiles are much larger than their current American counterparts.

Thus, eventually they may be able to carry many more multiple warheads, known as MIRVs, and with more atomic punch in each one.

In a news conference primarily devoted to the Vladivostok accord and the domestic economy, the president strongly urged Congress to speed up action in his economic proposals to fight inflation and recession at the same time.

The President reiterated his opposition to gasoline rationing and a gasoline tax increase designed to reduce consumption.

The American people supported him on these points and that Congress would never add a new gasoline tax increase, he said.

Declaring that we are going to take "bumps and lumps" as the recession develops, the president nevertheless said that "our greatest danger today" is to fall victim to some of the "more exaggerated alarms" being generated.

Seven Slain, Jailer Freed

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Troops and police, backed by sharpshooters, stormed a Brazilian prison Monday night, killing seven convicts and freeing a critically wounded warden.

Four prisoners, led by bank robber Francisco Posa, de Silva, had held warden Darci Bitencourt and two of his aides hostage for more than ten hours at Evaristo Morais prison before the battle flared when the inmates tried to escape by climbing out a window.

ALL SHIPSHAPE ABOARD SOYUZ

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two cosmonauts manoeuvred in earth orbit today in a shakedown flight for next summer's joint Soviet-American space mission.

Tass said the two spacemen — Col. Anatoly Filipchenko, 46, the commander, and civilian Nikolai Rukavishnikov, 42, the flight engineer — reported "everything in order" aboard Soyuz 16.

U. S. and Soviet space officials conferred by telephone about the flight, according to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Houston and U.S. ground stations tracked the craft.

The Soviets gave wide publicity to Soyuz 16, apparently in an effort to dispel doubts raised by past mishaps in the Kremlin's troubled space program.

Western experts said they expected the Soyuz 16 to be the first of two dry run flights by the Soviets to satisfy American space officials.

The experts said NASA is happy about the proven ability of the moon-tested Apollo but would like to see a couple of trouble-free warmup Soyuz missions before the joint project.

DEPUTIES PROMISED PROGRAM OVERHAUL

VANCOUVER (CP) —Deputy sheriffs in British Columbia were told Monday that the provincial government will undertake a complete second look at the deputy sheriffs program.

Following a three-hour meeting with the director of sheriff services, Jeff Mortimer, the deputy sheriffs said they are confident improvements in security for escorting prisoners will be made.

The meeting took no decision on their request that they be armed.

A brief was presented to Mortimer and sheriff shop steward Lorne Presley said the contents of the brief were confidential.

There would be another meeting Dec. 12, he added.

The meeting was called after two deputies were wounded during violent escapes by prisoners last week in Nanaimo and here.

Grim Reality Of 'The Hole'

ABOUT 30 WINNIPEG tow-truck operators staged a demonstration at the legislative building Monday to protest the provincial government's refusal to authorize higher towing fees. Earlier, the men announced they would require motorists to pay directly for towing services instead of billing Autopac, the provincial government's auto insurance agency, for services rendered. "The boys are really upset," said Gerald Maeren, president of the towing division of the automobile trade association, who directed Monday's demonstration. "We can't operate on the old prices. Everything's gone up . . . everything, including insurance."

OTTAWA — Inger Hansen, Canada's correctional ombondsman suggested Monday that solitary confinement be eliminated from most Canadian jails.

Inger Hansen says the hole — solitary confinement or dissociation, whatever the term used — can be cruel punishment and inhuman treatment.

She joined three prisoners in painting a grim picture of living alone for 23½ hours a day in a small, bleak room where amenities often are provided only at the whim and convenience of guards.

She said the study should determine whether the hole is useful as a punishment, is the most efficient way to protect certain prisoners and whether there can be an alternative for the latter point.

The recommendation probably is the most dramatic of 11 that Hansen, Vancouver criminal lawyer who was appointed "correctional investigator" for Solicitor'General Warren Allmand last year, made in her first annual report tabled in the Commons Monday.

Another that could become highly controversial calls for appointment of an outsider to preside over in-prison disciplinary hearings and to determine guilt or innocence of prisoners.

The others call for:

—Changes in laws and regulations concerning earned remission time off for good behavior; statutory remission serving the last third of a sentence on the outside and temporary absences. These are expected to be covered in legislation that Allmand will submit to Parliament shortly.

—Changes or an end to practices under which prisoners must forfeit property.

—Appointment of a lawyer to examine, adjust and make recommendations for changes in the disposition of prisoner claims for injuries or loss of property. Hansen reports serious delays in dealing with these claims and many injuries, mainly loss of fingers, going uncompensated.

—The right for a prisoner to invest his funds outside the prison. At present his funds could be put into the Inmate Trust Fund, the interest from which goes into the Inmate Welfare Fund.

Hansen prepared the 85-page study of criminal complaints after visiting every institution in Canada at least once in the last year.

Just An Empty Gesture?

The announcement the other day by Manpower Minister Robert Andras that from now on the two main wings of his department — Unemployment Insurance Commission and Canada Manpower — will work more closely together in finding work for the so-called unemployed employables (individuals who lack needed skills) was a long overdue policy change.

Until now, UIC and Manpower have gone their separate ways and at times almost seemed to work at cross-purposes. Co-operation has been extremely limited. The UIC gets periodic bulletins from Manpower on jobs in demand, which in Victoria have been limited to high turnover occupations like office workers, restaurant help and some construction tradesmen, along with highly qualified hard to fill positions and unemployment insurance recipients in these categories are told to pay a visit to Manpower's offices.

People not in these categories — and frequently the bulletins are out of date — quickly learn that the local Manpower office isn't the best place to find a job. In fact, Manpower fills only a relatively small percentage of all job vacancies — reading the want ads, and pounding the pavement are probably both better methods. And unless one is prepared to insist strenuously, it's unlikely that a job seeker will get in to talk to a Manpower counsellor about switching his line of work. He's referred to posted notices of job vacancies instead. Re-training and upgrading of skills are a very small part of Manpower operations.

Nobody should get too excited at the minister's announcement of a pilot project in B.C. integrating efforts of the provincial departments of labor and human resources with federal agencies in finding more or less permanent work for "those Canadians who have special difficulty getting and keeping jobs." Two communities in B.C. will be involved in the three-year pilot project. It seems to be an exceedingly modest effort — more or less a vague public works program.

It's part of Andras' community employment program essentially an alternative to UIC and welfare. If a number of reports from Ottawa are close to the mark, it seems to be mainly a re-shuffling of the various bureaucracies involved.

"Andras' version of community employment is, and even these descriptions are too polite, a caricature and a charade," said Richard Gwyn of the Toronto Star a week ago. "It amounts to a three-year research exercise that will create more jobs for the civil servants than for the unemployed." A document outlining the scheme devotes half its length to detailing the bureaucratic structure to be set up.

B.C. Human Resources Minister Norman Levi, although he went along with the pilot project, complained bitterly to the Ottawa press corps after provincial ministers met with Andras that the federal government doesn't want to give an inch in the interest of submerging federal-provincial rivalry.

In short, the program announced by Andras is apparently a promising solution to the problems of chronic welfare and unemployment insurance recipients. If it had the firm support of government, along with the substantial amount of cash any plan to give these people useful work instead of handouts would require, it might just succeed. Unfortunately, the program seems to have neither.

Waiting for the Lightning

When former auditor general Maxwell Henderson — Max the knife, as he was known to rueful bureaucrats — took the government to task on spending each year it was front page news and usually resulted in a lively house of commons debate. The government even introduced a bill to curb the auditor general's power in 1970, but was forced to withdraw it in the wake of opposition and public wrath.

Henderson has retired and now we have a new auditor general, Montreal accountant J. J. Macdonell who says he will get corrective results by co-operation and consultation. The very nature of the job — delineating government waste—means the auditor general is the administration's adversary. Co-operation and consultation suggests that bad mistakes will be pointed out in private and rectified before the opposition or public have a chance to judge the government. The new spirit of co-operation may have been exemplified in one instance of wastage this year, which appears to have been treated as a joke by public and press alike. The Department of National Defence spent $102,000 to buy more caps for personnel because the first batch were measured with flaps down and turned out to be two sizes too small when the flaps were folded in.

What's so funny about wasting $102,000 because of somebody's stupid mistake? While the public is laughing it should remember the $102,000 comes out of every Canadian pocket. And Macdonnell seemed proud that the treasury board corrected 55 of the 117 abuses he singled out in the 1972-73 report. What about the other 62? If the government has corrected less than half of the items it is time for the auditor general to speak out. The opposition and public will take it from there.

Of course, the new auditor general has only been in the job for 17 months. Perhaps his methods will work as well as Henderson's confrontation tactics. But a government that spent $13 million refitting an obsolete aircraft carrier just before selling it for scrap at $1 million bears close watching. "If action is not taken, then my reports may become just as thunderous as Henderson's ever were," Macdonnell said. Canadians will be watching for the lightning.

Policy Review Lost Momentum

OTTAWA — Each Canadian family pays in taxes about $2,000 worth of social security to other Canadian families and individuals. Some families pay more, and some none at all, but that's the rough average cost of our $12 billion social security system. The figure seems huge, yet about four million Canadians — roughly one in six — are below the poverty line.

Those statistics measure the importance of Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde's two-year attempt to overhaul Canada's social security system. They measure also the seriousness of the fact that Lalonde's review is in trouble. It is losing momentum and direction and could finish next April with its goal of a "major step forward in our thinking about social policy" unfulfilled.

Lalonde's problems start with his own cabinet colleagues. Manpower Minister Robert Andras reduced the community employment program to a shambles. Intended to be an instrument to shift people from welfare into public works jobs it degenerated into a paperwork exercise.

Heavy Blow

Finance Minister John Turner delivered a heavier blow. In effect Turner froze Lalonde's social security review for at least 18 months. How this happened provides a useful insight into the workings of government.

In his budget Turner enjoyed the luxury of distributing an inflationary revenue windfall of $1.25 billion. He cut individual and corporate taxes but not a cent went to Lalonde's clients, the poor, the old, the disabled. For next year Turner committed himself to a budget deficit of $1.5 billion. This is so large it effectively leaves no room for new social security spending until the year following, 1976-77.

The peculiar process of budget-making made it possible for Turner to shape both social as well as economic policy. As is the custom, ministers, Lalonde included, had only a week to comment on the budget before it was delivered. No changes were made because too little time existed to argue them through.

Lalonde's other problems are of his own making. He started his review in fine political style, making use of the fact that the then-minority government needed New Democratic Party support as a way to push through increases in family allowances and in pensions early in 1973.

Since then Lalonde has tried to design the perfect social security scheme, a laudable goal except that politics is the art of the possible, not the perfect. As a consequence Lalonde's review has become badly bogged down; lost amid the charts and graphs has been any sight of a practical, realizable goal.

MARC LALONDE
. . . frozen out by Turner

At a closed meeting in Ottawa two weeks ago, federal and provincial welfare ministers debated a 71-page confidential report. The document is solid, detailed and academic. Six "models" of social security are examined, and are costed out in terms so broad the estimates range from $1.9 billion to $5.9 billion, (savings on existing programs would be about $1.5 billion).

The Ottawa meeting reduced the six models to three: A tax credit approach, advocated by Ontario but unlikely to be adopted because it would require a total overhaul of the existing income tax system; a guaranteed annual income system, proposed by Saskatchewan, but also unlikely to be approved because too heavy-handed; and Lalonde's original concept of a two-tier system of income supplementation for the so called working poor and of income support to some agreed minimum income (the confidential study suggests $4,800 for a four-member family) of those rendered unemployable because of personal or physical disabilities.

Lalonde's great achievement has been to initiate and to sustain what is an exercise in genuine federal-provincial co-operation. Some of this harmony is more apparent than real. "It is relatively easy for governments to co-operate when dollars are not involved," said Manitoba's Social Development Minister Saul Miller. "It is essential that we now face the financing issue directly."

Moral Yeadership

Lalonde's answer to Miller was, "we must first pick the right design and then decide how much we can afford to spend on it."

Lalonde's approach is rational, but unreal. Politics is the art of the possible, not of perfection. In politics no "right" design exists, only the best-possible design that can be implemented at a particular moment, given public attitudes and the amount of money available.

Miller's approach, which the conference rejected, is less elegant — decide how much money is available and then divide it up in the best-possible scheme. The oddity is that Lalonde, one of the most pragmatic members of the cabinet, must know full well that rough and ready decisions such as those Miller proposed, soon will have to be taken. To do this of course takes leadership. Perhaps a more telling point of Miller's was his statement: "I reject the notion that governments should not exert moral leadership."

JAMES RESTON

Arms 'Ceiling' No Breakthrough

WASHINGTON — For the last six years, the United States has worked away patiently and diligently to get some kind of nuclear arms agreement with the Soviet Union, and apparently "some kind of agreement" has finally been worked out in the Ford-Brezhnev meeting at Vladivostok. If so, a lot of credit has to be given to Gerard Smith, Paul Nitze, J. G. Parsons and many others who kept the talks going under the Nixon-Kissinger guidelines over these difficult six years, but the details of the agreement are still extremely vague and the announcement of the agreement was very odd.

It was described by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in Vladivostok as a "breakthrough." President Gerald Ford gave some of the facts to some of the leaders in Congress, and Senator Henry Jackson of Washington State was given a personal briefing by Maj.-Gen. Brent W. Scowcroft, Kissinger's deputy at the National Security Council, but it is still not clear what the U.S. has broken through to.

$220 Billion

The facts released so far raise some troubling questions. Under the agreement, both sides would limit themselves to about 2,500 nuclear missiles and bombers, and each would apparently be permitted to build about 1,200 missiles with multiple atomic warheads, or twice as many as the United States originally proposed.

This was described by Ford to the congressional leaders as putting a cap or ceiling on the number of atomic weapons that could be built, and a lower ceiling than the Soviets wanted, but it would still leave both sides with enough nuclear weapons to blow up the world, not once but many times over. It also leaves room for another expensive round of missile development in a hungry world now spending over $220 billion a year on military arms.

The official answer here is that this "was the best we could do" and that it's better than no ceiling at all, but it limits the numbers without controlling the problem. It's a little like passing a gun control law that "limits" each adult citizen to one sub-machinegun and each child to one "Saturday night special."

Nevertheless, the principle has at least been established that somewhere some limits must be put on the arms race. The first strategic arms agreement limited the number of anti-ballistic missiles and the second the number of offensive weapons. It is a slow and dangerous business, but presumably a third or fourth or fifth agreement could eventually start lowering bhe ceiling on offensive weapons and therefore the staggering cost of the race.

HENRY JACKSON
. . . Soviets' main worry

It is interesting to speculate on why Brezhnev agreed to any ceiling at all and extended the agreement until 1985, by which time both he and Ford will be out of power. The most likely explanation is that the ceiling is so high that it doesn't really interfere with his policies.

Also, it continues the appearance of wanting accommodation with the U.S. and increases Brezhnev's chances of getting the trade and advanced technology of the U.S., which would ease his internal problems for the rest of his regime.

Finally, Moscow has come to regard Senator Jackson as the most dangerous villain in American politics and, with both Senators Kennedy and Mondale now out of the 1976 campaign, the man most likely to replace Ford in the White House.

This is not very happy or reassuring though in the Kremlin, in Moscow's way of thinking, Jackson might mean a return to the worst days of the cold war, so it would rather deal with Ford and, if possible, lock the U.S. into a 10-year commitment to the policy of detente.

Incidentally, it could be that the Soviets are midjudging Jackson as much as they misjudged Nixon in the 1950s and 1960s. He has given them a hard time on their emigration policy and he has been a big military budget man ever since he came to Washington, but lately he has been taking a more moderate line, and his complaint about the Vladivostok agreement was not that it limited the arms race too much but that it didn't limit it enough.

New Foundation

Jackson said he was extremely disappointed that the agreement did not provide for mutual phased reductions of nuclear weapons on both sides, but permitted the Soviets "an astonishingly large number of MIRV (Multiple Independent Re-entry Vehicles) missiles," and assured that "the only way for the U.S. to maintain strategic equality would be to spend billions more on increasing our own force capabilities." Nobody wanted to see that, Jackson added.

The chances are, nevertheless, that once all the details are released and the issues debated, congress will agree with the president that any limitation is better than none. It is not a big "breakthrough," but it's not a breakdown either.

The two nuclear giants will go on about as before under their agreed "ceiling," but what they need more than a ceiling is a new foundation for world order, and this still seems extremely remote.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Women's Studies

Our minister of education, in supporting the status of women, has stated that "there is an obvious need for a women's study course in our schools."

It is not obvious to me. I see a need for many things, but such a course is definitely not one of them.

What right has a minority, self-interest group such as the status of women to interfere in the school system? Especially as they have shown very little concern for children.

I object to having young people exploited (for exploitation it is) to feed the petty grievances of this group.

As for elimination of "sexist references" in the textbooks, how supposed leaders in education can so concern themselves with this, yet give no thought to the lack of quality in these books, baffles me.

Take care, Mrs. Dailly, lest you create a monster.—Angry Mother.

Symphony Troubles

It is shocking to read on the front page of The Times of Nov. 27 that two members of the board of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra complain of nitpicking, backbiting, and pettiness in board meetings. Unfortunately the impression is conveyed in The Times' article that the responsibility for this rests with the two members who resigned from the board in disagreement with the way in which symphony affairs are being managed.

This I find hard to credit. Murray Adaskin is one of Canada's most eminent and respected composers and a very personable man to boot. Indeed I wonder how a board that cares about the orchestra it manages can afford to lose an influential and knowledgeable man like Adaskin, who would doubtless be one of the first persons to be asked about the management and quality of the orchestra by any responsible funding agency, and certainly by the Canada Council. Arthur Irwin too has had a distinguished career in public service, serving in Ottawa as commissioner and chairman of the National Film Board, as ambassador to Brazil, to Mexico, and to Guatemala, as high commissioner for Canada in Australia, and as publisher of The Victoria Times.

I am not familiar with the accomplishments of the members of the symphony board who remain, but I find it hard to believe that the board can afford to lose these two men, or to convey the impression to the press that they were responsible for whatever nitpicking, backbiting, and pettiness that may have been aired at board meetings.

It is the responsibility of the playing musicians in the symphony and its conductor, Laszlo Gati, to provide symphony goers with interesting programs of music, well-performed, and with an exciting roster of guest artists. This they have done admirably. In the last four years the playing of the orchestra has improved immensely. With this improvement in playing, more challenging programs have been undertaken. And now we here in Victoria have the opportunity to listen to some of the world's best soloists. Indeed for the first time music lovers in Vancouver have reason to come to Victoria, and do come, to hear performances they will not hear at home.

I ask: has the symphony board grown in the way the orchestra itself has? Has it fulfilled its responsibility of attracting the kind of support, both from the private and public sectors, that a symphony orchestra of the present calibre of ours merits? Is it providing the kind of sensitive and careful management that is needed to nourish and preserve a quality orchestra?—Charles B. Daniels, 202-1157 Fairfield Road.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of December 3, 1914

The legislature of the province has been summoned to meet on the afternoon of Thursday, January 21. This will be the third session of the thirteenth parliament of British Columbia. The date was decided upon at a meeting of the cabinet held yesterday. Ministers will get to work at once, it is said, on the preparation of the sessional program but this will not prevent the usual practice of bringing down the most important legislation of the session when the house is tired out and not in a mood to give as much attention to the measures as these demand.

Europe Talks ... and Talks On Security

By JOHN GOSHKO

GENEVA — When it was convened 15 months ago by a gala meeting of foreign ministers, the 35-nation European security conference was widely hailed as an idea whose time had come. Now, it looks increasingly like one that time has passed by.

The conference, involving some 600 diplomats from 33 European countries, plus the United States and Canada, is still a highly visible part of the Geneva scene. The delegates meet almost daily to slog their way through the tortuous, inch-by-inch negotiations aimed at drawing a blue-print for ending the Cold War.

Nor is there much doubt that the effort eventually will succeed — at least in a formal sense. Most delegates now talk cautiously about winding up their work by February or March, and there also is general optimism that the project will be given a concluding seal of approval next spring or summer at a summit meeting of the top leaders from the participating countries.

The scenario will be played out in roughly this way, the delegates agree, because both East and West have too much invested to let it fail. Still, overshadowing everything is a nagging sense of doubt about whether the security conference — once considered the cornerstone of the movement toward European detente — any longer has any real meaning.

In part, this reflects the practical difficulties of writing a complex politicial document that would be acceptable to so many countries — many with widely differing and contradictory expectations about what the conference should do.

Even more, though, it is because the conference was unable to meet the original, overly optimistic timetable set for it and has thus failed to keep pace with the changed circumstances of East-West relations.

Many of the problems with which it was supposed to deal already have been resolved through other means. At the same time, other elements have been introduced into the talks that one side or the other regard as cutting too close to its vital interests, and this had provoked disputes that probably can be settled only through compromises so bland as to be meaningless.

To the Soviet Union and its allies — the original proponents of the conference — the main aim was to formally seal the postwar division of Europe into clearly defined ideological camps and to achieve respectability for East Germany. In the meantime though, the Communist side has achieved these goals through its bilateral treaties with West Germany.

On the other side, the countries of Western Europe, particularly the smaller states, have regarded the conference as a wedge with which to pry some openings in the Iron Curtain and liberalize the flow of people and information between the two halves of the continent.

This does not mean that the negotiations have settled into a power struggle between two monolithic blocs. For example, the Western position has the discreet backing of the European neutrals and such maverick Communists as Yugoslavia and Romania, which hope to get out a bit from Moscow's shadow.

Even in the Western camp, there have been clearly discernible philosophical differences between the United States and some of its allies. It is no secret that Secretary of State Kissinger has never been especially enthusiastic about the security conference and has not assigned it a very high rank on the scale of the U.S. diplomatic priorities.

By now, the differences have been composed to the extent that the United States and its allies seem reasonably united on the broad outlines of their goals and tactics necessary to achieve them.

But, it is also clear that Washington's expectations from the conference lag behind those of the west Europeans. And, in the view of many conference sources, this has contributed to the biggest deadlock hamstringing the talks — namely Moscow's firm refusal to make any meaningful concessions on the agenda item known as "the freer movement of peoples, ideas and information."

The Russians, obviously concerned about the effects on their internal dissidence problem, have been trying to water down the language of the conference declaration into a general statement about "cultural exchange" or to saddle it with escape clauses capable of preventing practical implementation of broadened East-West contracts.

Their tactic has been to maintain an unrelentingly negative position, apparently in the hope that the West will eventually tire of the wrangling and allow its demands to be eroded. Many delegates believe that the Russians, aware of Kissinger's tepid attitude toward the whole project, have been counting on Washington to presure its allies for a more moderate approach to the human contacts issue.

For several months, there was considerable question here about how Washington would resolve this dilemma — whether it would risk undercutting the moral stance adopted by its allies for the sake of an accommodation with the Russians.

Now, the indications are that the United States is giving great height to the arguments of its allies. This is so even though U.S. policy-makers apparently still have doubts about how effective any piece of paper will be in pushing the Russians toward domestic liberalization.

In most non-Communist delegations, the feeling is that if the West stands firm, the Russians eventually will have to make some concession in order to preserve the credibility of their detente policy. But there is substantial disagreement about how far the Kremlin will go and whether the final result will justify all the time and effort that has been expended on the security conference.

The pessimists, who seem to be growing in number, note that the conference originally was expected to conclude by the end of 1973. Now, these participants are talking about a schedule that would wind the conference up a year later than originally planned.

From the Communist standpoint, the final conference documents will put an additional seal of legitimacy on Communist territorial gains from the Second World war. But, in contrast to the situation in 1970 and 1971, the existing borders in Europe are now universally accepted as a fact of life.

The West, for its part, undoubtedly will win what some cynics characterize as "the right to sell a few more copies of Le Monde and the International Herald Tribune in Moscow." Western gains in this area could still add up to considerably more, but that doesn't seem too likely in light of the intransigence shown by the Soviet Union.

Geneva conference not Kissinger's style

Oil Rift Unhealed

By ADRIAN HAMILTON

LONDON — There can be few issues which have aroused so much passion, so many words, as oil. Ever since the producers first broke up the traditional price-negotiating mechanisms a year ago, the world has been filled with argument over whether oil prices would fall or continue to rise, over how the oil states would spend their revenues and how the financial institutions of the world should be adjusted to recycle their surplus funds, over how the energy crisis was to be beaten.

After a year of dispute, oil prices remain high and continue to rise. Producer surpluses continue to accumulate in Western banks. The world's financial institutions continue to strain under the impact of consumer debt and producer wealth. Nothing practical has been done.

Part of the reason is the divisions among the consumers and the producers themselves over what exactly should be done about the current drift toward confrontation between the oil states and the industrialized West.

The consumer positions: At one extreme there are those, most notably Secretary of State Kissinger, who believe that the consumer has been effectively held to ransom by an artificial cartel of producers. Under this line, the first necessity is for the consumers to bury their differences before any meeting with the producers.

Cool Reception

For the Europeans and Japanese, who cannot afford such a potential confrontation to go wrong because of their extreme dependence on Middle East oil, the problem is not that simple, and all have tended to give a cool reception to Kissinger's proposals.

The strongest opposition inevitably comes from France, which has long believed that the Europeans should attempt to gain a special relationship with the producers as an alternative voice to the United States. As elucidated by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, France believes the solution lies not in a banding together of consumers but in an early meeting, on lines already suggested by Saudi Arabia, of a select group of 10 to 12 producers, industrialized consumers and developing countries. This would formulate a new price structure that would guarantee producer revenues against inflation in return for stability of prices and would pursue ways of recycling money to help the poorest-off.

While not opposed entirely to the concept of a consumer body to handle emergency action, France believes that plans to develop alternative energy sources should be pursued at a European level rather than in wider contexts that would all too easily be dominated by America.

Others Fearful

In between the approaches of France and the United States lie the other major consumer countries such as Japan and Britain. Fearful that any confrontation with the producers would end in disaster, they are reluctant to accept Kissinger's plan. But nonetheless they remain equally nervous that a meeting with the producers on French lines would simply result in establishing a floor price for oil giving the producers everything they want.

The producer positions: The producers also are encountering their differences, depending on their relative dependence on oil revenues and their relative prospects for using high oil prices to fund economic growth.

There are the extreme proponents of producer power, led by such countries as Algeria and Venezuela. For these, the dramatic rise in oil prices is just the start of a major switch in wealth between the industrialized and colonializing West and the exploited developing world. In need of every penny they can get to fund development, Algeria and Venezuela have argued that the producer cartel should be used to rationalize oil production to prevent supply ever exceeding demand. The real need, Algeria has argued, is for the oil world to lead the developing world into taking control of its natural resources and fixing prices for a whole range of commodities.

Firmly against this concept is Saudi Arabia, which hasn't the same prospects for economic growth as other major producers and which is therefore much more concerned about the effect of high oil prices on Western economic stability. Although its ideas of a solution have never been fully clarified, it has suggested first a meeting of selected producers and consumers; second, a promise of price stability and perhaps even price reduction in exchange for guarantees against inflation; third, and most recently, a producer-controlled rather than consumer-controlled move into longer-term investments in the West.

Emerging recently as a force between the radical and conservative Arab countries has been Iran. Like Algeria, Iran needs money for economic development and is therefore in favor of high prices. But like Saudi Arabia, she has become worried about the impact of high prices on Western financial institutions and the damage that this could do the real value of her monetary revenues. The Shah's proposal would therefore seek to introduce a new unified system of oil prices to replace the present confusion between company-owned and state-owned oil costs and tie that price, not necessarily in agreement with the consumer, to an index of costs for Western goods which would ensure that the purchasing power of the oil dollar did not fall.

Some Plus Signs

As the year moves into its winter peak demand for oil, there are some signs of progress. In the Middle East, there appears to be a growing realization by the producers that there are limits to which the price of oil can be forced and that there is a need to help solve the financial and economic problems posed by oil if the producers are not to be pulled down in an inflationary recession in the West.

On the consumer side, Kissinger's Energy Co-ordinating Group has at least got off the ground. There appears to be a growing understanding that a solution to the recycling problem has become urgent and there is some indication that the consumers are finally coming to accept that. In the short term, the position of the Middle East producers may be unassailable. But the world still has a long way to go before a mutually agreeable solution is found to the oil problem.

The Catholic Alternative

By COLMAN McCARTHY

Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church met in the Vatican recently, attending the fourth synod in seven years and representing a membership of 577 million world citizens. The significance of the meeting may have been more what Pope Paul said than what the bishops did.

In a last-day speech, the Pope thanked the bishops for their counsel and wisdom. He told them, though, that "not everything that emerged is to be regarded as valid." He reminded them that the Pope runs the church, with his power "full, supreme and universal," and that the faith can survive only if it is universal.

As if to remind everyone exactly what the content of that faith could involve, the Pope went a few days later to address the World Food Conference on the subject of birth control. "It is inadmissible that those who have control of the wealth and resources of mankind should try to resolve the problems of hunger by forbidding the poor to be born."

★

By itself, the Pope's birth control statement is easily handled. First, there is the counter-argument that the wealthy are not "forbidding" the poor to be born but ask only that the poor have children they can raise with dignity and comfort; second, those who "control" the world's wealth include the Vatican, which might tell us how much of its vast resources is being used to end hunger. The Pope's statement, as well as the one at the closing of the synod, commands attention for another reason: its affirmation that the institutional church demands loyalty not only to the religion of Jesus but also to the regulations of Rome.

Church history is filled with heresies and schisms that led groups to break away from Rome but what is happening today is different: the heretics and schismatics — those church members who believe, among the other things that birth control is allowable, even necessary, or who approve abortion — are not leaving the church. They stay in, calling themselves everything from "cultural Catholics" to post-Christian Catholics. How many are in this group cannot be known, but the number is surely large that read the Pope's recent pronouncement on population and said to itself, "well, that's his opinion."

Such a reaction continues the pattern set a few years ago when young Catholic couples who wanted only one or two children went "shopping" for priests who would sanction artificial birth control. The newly ordained Father Relevant was sought out, rather than old Monsignor O'Malley. The same consumers guide approach to religion has been applied to other choices. By careful shopping, a Sunday mass can be found that is an "experience," not merely a worship service.

It is possible to shop among theologians, some whose books see the Pope as infallible, others that he is "a moral leader." There is the Dutch catechism or the Baltimore catechism.

All this adds a thorn that has never before been in the church's crown. Sinners in the pew can be dealt with — offer forgiveness and tell them to tithe — but what is to be done with a church of shoppers? What is a Catholic? In the church before Vatican II, it was exactly the united-front identity that gave the church its strength: everyone avoided meat on Friday, nobody saw a dirty movie if Cardinal Spellman said not to, and families with eight, ten or twelve children were keeping the faith.

This identity — everyone knew and kept the rules — is gone now, the fences of regulations being taken down, with everyone free to run amid the new meadows of personal choice. If such a style of religion existed 400 years ago, Henry VIII and Martin Luther could have called themselves cultural Catholics and had their defiance hailed as "religious experiments." They were being "honest" with themselves.

If only the institutional church today had a few kings or monks with the civility to clear out when they didn't like the rules. But that's the trouble — large numbers of Catholics don't want to become Anglicans or Lutherans. The question raised is less whether these events will see the liberals or conservatives winning out — those labels are as meaningless in religion as in politics — but whether we are seeing the end of an institution that has survived for 20 centuries.

In refusing to bend the church's position on birth control — at a time when a near-universal consensus says that overpopulation is causing much of the current misery suffered by millions — the Pope is making a moral issue out of what almost everyone sees as a social and economic issue. It will be solved not by an encyclical — humane vitae — but by a complexity of forces involving money, politics and traditions.

By such a stance, the Pope inadvertently lengthens the shopping list. Undoubtedly, some Catholics will choose the Pope's version of Catholicism, beginning with Maurice Cardinal Otunga of Kenya who said at the synod: "Some African countries are already feeling pressures for family planning and the insidious propaganda for birth control."

★

A recent issue of Commonweal carries an article, "Church Membership and Models," which lists six forms of contemporary Catholicism. The first is known for "conformity to clearly-held and firmly defined doctrines and it is the task of church officials to see that they are maintained in their entirety and those who reject or adulterate the doctrines should . . . be excluded." Another model sees "the church not as an institution but as an event." A third choice offers membership "by affinity and sympathy; it would seem fastidious to introduce doctrinal tests apart from general affirmations of the type 'Jesus is the Lord'." Another model says the "church is nowhere to be found on earth; the best that can be hoped for of any particular group of Christians is that they should be on the way towards their goal."

Can an institution known for centuries for its changeless truths survive the pressures of so many provisional definitions? History runs deep with accounts of the church successfully repelling attacks — from Attila the Hun to Madeline Murray O'Hare, the atheist. But now it must survive its own members.

★

It is a unique challenge because, at least among Americans, the move is less to reform the church than to democratize it. Parish councils flourish, wellheads pouring advice upon pastors and bishops. But the latter are not put in and out of office by a fickle public, so the advice can be ignored and allowed to die. Whether it will rest in peace is a question.

The church may be old, but the religious impulse in man — in whatever form, from sun worship to chanting psalms — is older, so old that the needs of individuals seeking a spirituality always takes precedence over the rules of institutions seeking longevity.

B.C. Egg Pullout Backed

Provincial Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Monday he supports the B.C. Egg Marketing Board's decision to withdraw from the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency.

"CEMA has not done the things that it said it would do," Stupich said, adding the B.C. board will likely rescind its decision if CEMA improves.

Under the federal-provincial egg agreement, the provincial board must serve withdrawal notice one month before the end of this year and the notice becomes effective at the end of 1975, he said.

Asked if steps were being taken to improve the Canadian egg market, the minister replied he met with other agriculture ministers in Ottawa last month and a five-man advisory committee was set up "that will have quite a lot of power in operating CEMA."

Ed Morgan, secretary-manager of the B.C. Egg Marketing Board, said formal notice to withdraw from CEMA was served Nov. 29.

"The subject has been discussed with the provincial government and after taking into account the many representations made to them by egg producers, along with the effect on the B.C. egg industry," Morgan said, "They have unanimously agreed that, at this time, the best interests of the B.C. egg industry would be served by withdrawing from CEMA."

Morgan said the decision to withdraw can be rescinded any time before it becomes effective.

In Toronto meanwhile, Brian Ellsworth, manager of the Ontario Egg Marketing Board said there is a need to reorganize and restructure the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) and that the B.C. Egg Marketing Board should be persuaded to remain a part of CEMA in order to see the changes through.

Morgan, recently told a House of Commons committee inquiring into the operation of the national egg marketing system that the B.C. board is owed more than $450,000 by CEMA and is with-holding a levy imposed by the federal agency.

CEMA has said it owes the B.C. board a little more than $23,000.

"We're hopeful that the B.C. board can be encouraged to stay in the plan," Ellsworth said.

"It's a case of the B.C. board taking drastic steps to bring about reorganization of CEMA."

CABANAS
. . . defiance

Legend Survives as Mexican 'Robin Hood' Shot

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Lucio Cabanas is dead, but not his legend. The cafe ballads still sing about his decade of defiance in the rugged Sierra Madre mountains.

The Mexican government said the 36-year-old leftist leader was killed Monday near the Pacific resort of Acapulco, climaxing two days of fighting in which 28 guerrillas and two soldiers died.

"I just don't believe it's true," a worker said in Mexico City. In southwestern Mexico, popular cafe ballads about the teacher-turned-guerrilla rang out in taverns.

Government sources said the bullet-riddled body of Cabanas, who had a Robin Hood reputation among Mexico's poor, was undergoing an autopsy at an army base.

A defence ministry communique said government troops gunned down the commando chief and ten followers in a Sierra Madre battle Monday, two days after 17 of his guerrillas were slain in similar clash.

Cabanas and his band were denounced by the government as "common criminals," responsible for nearly a decade of ambushes, kidnappings and murders. Cafe folk ballads, however, glorified him as a modern day Robin Hood.

The songs said he distributed his booty among poor peasants of Guerrero State, one of Mexico's most impoverished regions. In the past year, police credited Cabanas with four kidnappings and a take of $720,000 in ransom money.

In the most publicized kidnapping, he seized Sen. Ruben Figueroa while the 74-year-old legislator was trying to negotiate with the rebel leader. Troops freed the senator three months later in a Sierra Madre shoot-out.

Cabanas, who led a leftist group called the Poor People's Party, turned to guerrilla activities in 1966.

Francisco Davila Otero, an Acapulco police official and friend of Cabanas in their student days, said recently the guerrilla chief's struggle was "sincere."

"He was always true to his ideals," Davila said. "He never faltered."

But his one-time captive, Sen. Figueroa, called Cabanas "mentally deranged, cruel, with a thirst for sensational publicity, guided by an infantile leftism."

Military authorities said Cabanas' activites ended with his death, but some Mexicians thought otherwise.

"Someone else like him will appear soon," one laborer said in Mexico City.

Pioneer 11 Hurled Toward Saturn

Times News Services

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Hurled by tremendous orbital motion from its encounter with Jupiter, Pioneer 11 shot away today for the first spacecraft look at the ringed planet saturn.

The 570-pound pioneer swept Monday night through Jupiter's radiation belts to a point 26,000 miles from the planet's cloud tops — three times closer than Pioneer 10 dared approach last December.

Sweeping under the South Pole and out over the North Pole, Pioneer 11 demonstrated that the planet can be used as a slingshot to toss bigger spacecraft of the future out for investigations of the outer planets.

It had not been known before whether a spaceship close enough to Jupiter to catch its orbital motion could survive a radiation belt equal in power to several hydrogen bombs.

Pioneer was hit close to the planet with an intense radiation peak that lasted only a few minutes.

So numerous were the electrical sparks on the hull of the spacecraft that they triggered at least two false signals to spacecraft instruments.

One signal turned on heaters in the fuel line, sending temperatures soaring a much as 10 degrees. Another swiveled the antenna two degrees, which caused a drop in the strength of the signal coming back to earth and a loss of as much as two per cent of the information being beamed by Pioneer 11 at the time.

"It could have been a lot worse," a NASA official said. "Pioneer 10 tickled Jupiter's dragon's tail but Pioneer 11 flew right into the dragon's nouth. It emerged only a little singed."

At Saturn Pioneer will find a gas planet 700 times the volume of earth, yet light enough to float in water. Saturn's three rings are believed to be composed of flying rocks and ice.

Pioneer's exact course — whether it cuts between the rings or flies over them — will be decided by the space agency in a few months.

The decision to send Pioneer to Saturn was made when the spacecraft was half way to Jupiter. At that time Pioneer 10 discovered enough about Jupiter's radiation to make the risk worthwhile.

Pioneer 11 will reach Saturn September 5, 1979. If its nuclear power source does not decay too much, the space agency may direct the craft on a journey of a few more years to the planet Uranus.

Pioneer 10, a year after its visit to Jupiter, is cruising at a steady 45,000 miles an hour on a course which in 1987 will make it the first manmade object to leave the solar system. It is expected to broadcast at least until 1979.

Arbitration for Teachers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The contract dispute between Vancouver's teachers and the school board has been sent to binding arbitration, a spokesman for the B.C. Teachers Federation said Monday.

The Vancouver unit, largest in the province, had requested that their negotiations be conducted locally, rather than through the central bargaining unit of the B.C. School Trustees Association.

"We tried to get together Saturday," the spokesman said. "But we couldn't get a commitment for local bargaining. And we had specific instructions from our membership not to talk to the B.C.S.T.A."

The deadline for voluntary settlement of teachers' contracts passed midnight Friday. Under special legislation passed in the last B.C. legislature all unresolved contracts go to binding arbitration after that date.

TION AFTER THAT DATE.

"I am very sorry this has happened," said school board member Elliott Gose.

"The B.C.S.T.A. is our agent and neither side could see their way clear to negotiate because of this matter of principle," he said.

The Vancouver dispute is one of nine contracts that may face binding arbitration under the new law. The Qualicum district reached a setlement averaging about 17 per cent during the weekend.

Besides Vancouver, districts which have not recorded settlements with B.C.T.F. are: Lillooet; Peace River (North); South Cariboo; Alberni; Courtenay; Campbell River; Skeena-Cassiar; and North Thompson.

Two Charged In Border Kidnapping

SEATTLE (AP) — Two Arkansas men were charged with kidnapping Monday after an encounter at the Canadian customs office near Blaine, Wash., followed by a police chase back into the state.

Charged were Benjamin Ralph Burgess, 24, and James Dale Compton, age unknown, both of Little Rock. Bail was set at $20,000 each in an appearance before a U.S. magistrate Monday afternoon.

The drama unfolded Sunday evening when an automobile bearing Oregon plates pulled up to the customs office, where the driver jumped out, shouting that he had been kidnapped by two men asleep in the back seat.

A customs officer waved Francis Carey of Springfield, Ore., into the office and followed him in.

Officials reported the passengers woke up and entered the office, demanding the car keys.

One customs officer attempted to intercede and was told to "keep your nose out of it, or else."

Carey tossed his keys to the men, who turned the car around and sped into the U.S. Burgess and Compton were arrested about three miles south of Blaine.

Carey told officers he had been forced to drive from Eugene, Ore., at knifepoint.

In announcing the arrest Sunday, authorities identified Compton by another name. In Little Rock, a citizen called the Associated Press Bureau to report that his name was the same as that given by Compton, and that his identification had been stolen some time earlier.

MURDER IN COLD TYPE

NEW YORK (Reuter) About 60 persons received advice monday night on how to commit murder.

The instructors were mystery novelists Lillian O'Donnell and Lawrence Blochman and Dr. Michael Baden, a pathologist from the New York Medical examiner's office.

These experts, brought together by Murder Ink, a bookshop here specializing in murder mysteries, each offered their version of the undetectable murder.

O'Donnell said pushing a victim out the window or in front of a car was the best method. Blochman suggested murdering a victim in a town where there is no medically-trained pathologist.

Baden suggested forcing a victim to write a suicide note at gunpoint, then hanging.

"The most effective method," Baden said, "is one in which the cause of death is apparent, but the classification—accidental or homicide cannot be made by the medical examiner. Throwing someone out of a window is like that. The same with drowning."

When an autopsy yields no obvious cause of death — such as poisons which go undetected at first — this makes the pathologist suspicious, he said, and further tests are carried out.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

CRASH CLUES

WASHINGTON (WP) — Disaster investigators, poking through the ruins of the TWA jetliner in which 92 died when it crashed Sunday near Upperville, Va., recovered the two metal boxes they hope will tell them why the plane was flying at half the required altitude when it failed to clear the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The Boeing 727 should have been at 3,400 feet over the last of the ridges, according to safety investigators, but instead it was at 1,700 feet. At that altitude it was fifty feet short of clearing Pairs Mountain, and no one survived when the plane sheared off trees and slammed into a rocky outcrop 23 miles west of its intended destination.

After 20 Years, Women in 'House'

Breaking tradition with both barrels, B.C. Youth Parliament opens Dec. 27 not only with girls taking part, but with a woman as lieutenant-governor.

Times columnist Bessie Forbes, a long-time advocate of women's rights, said today she was "surprised, delighted and honored on behalf of all women" who have persevered for equal opportunities, at being vhosen to open the Christmas holiday session.

"I've been fighting for 20 ears to add girls too the Older Boys' Parliament," Forbes remarked. When she was asked to be the first female lieutenant-governor, "it was sort of put up or shut up."

"But you can say I'm looking forward to it," she added.

Before retirement, Forbes was women's editor of the Times. She still writes a column three times a week.

Years before the female liberation movement blossomed, she urged the Older Boys' Parliament to admit girls and two years ago the assembly voted to reform and change its name.

Deputy premier Stephen D. Howell said, after 50 years of service the parliament had "undergone a facelift . . . and is eagerly awaiting the challenges of a second 50 years."

The move is part of an effort to broaden scope for the one-time church-oriented organization.

Members will represent the 48 electoral districts of the province, including dual-seat constituencies in Vancouver and the capital.

Members will be chosen from high schools, churches, universities and youth organizations throughout the province.

With consent of the B.C. legislature, which is now sitting until late January, the youth parlament uses the legislative chamber and obsevês the traditions of a real assembly.

They debate resolutions dealing with youth-oriented subjects and pass a "budget" covering the organization's own operating expenses.

Toronto Mayors Returned in Vote

- Canadian Press

Toronto Mayor David Crombie and other incumbent mayors in Metropolitan Toronto's five boroughs were returned to office Monday in province-wide municipal elections.

Some 775 municipalities, including 32 cities, held elections — in many cases in snow, sleet or hail.

Storms hit most of the heavily populated southern part of the province, and reports indicated low voter turnouts.

Crombie was out-polling his nearest opponent, Western Guard Leader Don Andrews, by about 15 to 1. None of the 10 candidates in the field against Crombie was considered serious.

Lorry Greenberg, a six-year veteran of municipal politics, was elected mayor of Ottawa.

The 40-year-old former controller and alderman defeated his three opponents — Tom McDougall, a 32-year-old former controller; Stuart Langford, a 28-year-old law student; and Alphonse Lapointe, 50, a local businessman.

With 294 of 540 polls reporting, Greenberg had 19,577 votes compared with 16,827 for McDougall, 1,588 for Langford and 920 for Lapointe.

Greenberg replaces Pierre Benoit in the city's $40,000-a-year position. Benoit, who steps down Dec. 31, said he would not seek re-election as mayor after he entered the Ontario provincial by-election in the Carleton East riding. He lost as the Progressive Conservative candidate.

In Windsor, hit by a 14-inch snowfall Sunday and Monday, about 40 of the city's 445 polls will be open again today. The 1972 Municipal Elections Act requires polls to be open for nine consecutive hours. Because of the weather, some Windsor polls opened late. The act requires such polls to be open again today for nine consecutive hours.

Ontario Premier William Davis said the government should take a look at changing the date of municipal elections to a more seasonable time of the year.

CANTABILE SINGERS IN RECITAL

The Wednesday evening series of recitals at St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra at Mason Street, will feature the Cantabile Singers this week.

Directed by Madeline Groos, the ensemble was formerly known as the Occasional Singers.

Accompanist for the 8 p.m. recital will be Norman Hurrle.

Final event in the fall series will take place Tuesday, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m., when Edward Norman, organist of St. John's, will present a recital of Christmas music on the organ.

He will perform works by Bach, Daquin, Barber, Dupre and Messiaen.

Wardair, Air Canada Merger Grounded

EDMONTON (CP) — A proposal by Air Canada to buy 33 1-3 per cent of the charter airline Wardair has fallen through, spokesmen for both companies confirmed Monday.

The two companies announced plans almost two years ago for a merger and the proposal survived hearings before the Canadian Transport Commission.

The original announcement said Air Canada had offered to buy one-third of Wardair's common shores with options on further non-voting preferred shares.

Interventions against the proposed deal were filed with the commission by CP Air, Pacific Western Airlines, Transair and the Vancouver Board of Trade.

The commission approved the transaction in March, 1973, but CP Air filed an appeal with the federal cabinet and the appeal was not considered until March of this year.

The appeal ultimately was rejected after it had held up the proposed deal for a year.

When officials of the two airlines resumed talking terms this year, they found vast changes in the economy, so the spread between Wardair's reqirements and Air Canada's position had grown too great.

A month ago, the two sides agreed to gorget the whole thing, spokesmen said, but the agreement won't affect the reciprocal arrangements involving the use of jet engines, maintenance and passenger-handling facilities.

Some Good in Depression As Building Costs Slide

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The cost of building materials can be expected to decline over the next 12 months, says Frank Reder, the new president of the British Columbia Construction Association.

The decline will be the result of the continuing world-wide recession and will be good news for the construction industry.

Reder said building materials will no longer be in short supply and the cost of construction, except for labor, will be down over the next year.

While prices are expected to be down almost right across the board, the main decline is expected to come in lumber prices once the shipments purchased at higher prices are cleared from the retail outlets.

A brisk pace of construction is expected to accompany the downturn in prices for materials.

The current construction pace is slightly overheated, especially in the Vancouver area. This translates as more work than the industry can handle comfortably, because of a shortage of workers and equipment.

The pace is expected to cool as weather worsens. Some slowing has already been noticed in the interior and northern B.C. due to weather conditions.

Above-average weather in Victoria and Vancouver is encouraging construction and the pace is similar to that of a normal summer month. The projects include schools and commercial buildings as well as residences. Apartment construction, however, is slack.

The recession evident in the resource industries has bypassed the construction industry so far, and the outlook is excellent for the next 12 months, Reder said.

Reder succeeds Wayne Farmer of Victoria as president, after a term as executive director of the association. He becomes the full-time president and chief executive officer under a new system adopted in November.

The association will also have a rotating board chairman as a supplementary spokesman. The first chairman under the new system is Lloyd Blain, vice president and general manager of Dawson and Hall Ltd., Vancouver.

Reder said the downard trend in building materials is already evident.

In the third quarter of 1974, seven of 61 major building items declined in price. Another 37 were stable, showing a levelling off process in advance of the downturn under way now.

Items on the downside in the third quarter included plywood, sheathing and cedar siding.

Reder made the following observations about the supply situation during the July-to-September period.

Steel — Supplies remain adequate but British Columbia continues to rely upon imports because domestic production cannot keep up with demand.

Wood products — There is a surplus of most wood products and the price has declined about 20 per cent in plywoods and green fir. There is little or no change in finished fir.

Roofing materials — Much improved over the last quarter, although spot shortages still exist.

Finishing materials — There have been moderate price increases in some finishing materials such as gypsum wallboard, 6 per cent, and flooring materials, 8 per cent. Ceramic tile is on the downside due to excess supply. However, paint and allied products were on the upside in the third quarter.

Mechanical items — Prices were generally stable in the third quarter with moderate increases in plumbing fixtures, baseboard radiation, grilles, registers and Duffusers. Copper pipe was down in price, reacting to lower copper prices. Insulation products were stable in price but there were some delays in deliveries.

Electrical — Rigid conduits and 12-circuit distribution panels were up in the third quarter but building wire and octagonal boxes were level.

Ways, Means Discovered To Outfox Wilbur

WASHINGTON — Wilbur Mills once was known as the intellectual giant of the house of representatives, a powerful man who held the country's tax laws in his grip and who could force presidents to come begging to him, hat in hand.

Now, friends and enemies alike are asking why he could not cope with a simple little sex scandal and fledgling movements are afoot to attempt the unthinkable — remove him next January as the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Already the Democratic caucus has removed the ways and means committee's power to make house committee assignments, and it is likely the committee will be expanded so that it can be packed with liberal Democrats.

Actress Shirley Maclaine, meanwhile, asked about Mills' claim that he launched her into show business, said Mills should "explain his ways and tell us what he means."

"I love old Wilbur," she said, "but I didn't meet him until late 1973. I was under the impression that I was launched a long time before that."

Noting the Arkansas Democrat's involvement with stripper Fanne Fox, Miss Maclaine said, "what he wanted me to do was flop on him and I'm not a midnight swimmer."

HELSINKI — Finland's First Lady, Mrs. Urho Kekkonen, died of a heart attack Monday at the Helsinki University hospital. She was 74. She last appeared in public during the visit of Queen Juliana of Holland last September.

HONOLULU — George Ariyoshi, son of a Japanese sumo wrestler, was sworn in as Hawaii's new governor Monday. He became the state's first chief executive of oriental ancestry. Ariyochi told a crowd of 8,000 that Hawaii must become "increasingly self-sustaining — in food production, in energy resources and in other basic necessities."

NEW YORK — Thomas Murphy, new chairman of General Motors, said Monday he hoped no roadblocks would be placed to hinder investment by oil-rich Arabs in the giant U.S. auto company. "It's a free market. It's an auction market," Murphy said. "I don't believe there's anything that should be put in the way in that category."

TORONTO — Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, has been awarded the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts Medal for 1974. He is the 20th recipient of the medal. The Toronto-based academy, founded in 1880, promotes the visual arts in Canada. It has 327 members.

WASHINGTON — John Dean, serving a one-to-four year sentence for obstruction of justice in the Watergate case, has petitioned a U.S. federal court to reduce his sentence. He asked to be freed immediately, or to have the sentence reduced to one year, making him eligible for parole after the New Year.

BOSTON — Kay Kyser, the one-time bandleader has been working at the Christian Science Church here. For the past nine months, Kyser, 68, has been manager of the film and broadcasting department of the church. For the last 23 years, he has guarded his privacy after leaving the entertainment business and declines to give interviews.

Tip From The Grave

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. mine safety officials have unearthed a half-century-old letter from escape artist Harry Houdini they say still may provide useful help for trapped coal miners.

Houdini's basic conclusion was that fear rather than lack of air caused the death of many miners and others trapped in air-tight compartments.

His advice was to remain calm and control breathing to stretch out air supply.

. . . AND THEN SOMEBODY STOLE HIS PURSE

SEATTLE (UPI) — Police report a 25-year-old man dressed in women's clothing reported his purse was snatched. The transvestite said a man jumped from a vehicle and grabbed the white, leather bag. It contained $30 in cash, a $50 silver bar with the words "Reno, Nevada," stamped on it and a $100 pair of prescription sunglasses.

—BEFORE THE JUDGE—

A young man charged with possessing marijuana received a conditional discharge Monday after provincial court was told he had the drug only to protect another person.

Gordon Parker, 17, of 2974 Oakdowne, received the discharge with the condition he keep the peace for six months.

Parker, who pleaded guilty, was found by police Aug. 9 sitting on the top level of the Fisgard Street carpark with a bag of marijuana stuffed in a wall crack behind him.

He was with a group of young persons.

Defence witness Ted Watchin, address not known, testifying under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, told the court he owned the marijuana.

Parker said he had carried the marijuana because he thought there was less risk in him having it because he did not have a criminal record.

Defence counsel Bob Bryden described Parker as being "the gullible follower-along."

He said Parker does not smoke the drug.

Bryden also pointed out Parliament is considering removing marijuana from the Narcotic Control Act.

Ostler dismissed this argument as having any influence on his decision to grant the discharge, saying the court should not consider possible changes in law.

Prosecutor Malcolm Macaulay neither supported nor opposed the application for a discharge — which means a criminal conviction is not recorded.

Macaulay did say there was no evidence to show Parker would be hurt anyore by a conviction than others of his age.

A family dispute about a car resulted in a 20-year-old man receiving a three-month jail term for committing wilful damage on Nov. 15.

Stephen Rawlings, of no fixed address, tore a closet door from its hinges, broke a lamp and smashed the top of a portable washing machine at his parent's apartment on Dowler after his father had refused to give his cars keys to his son.

Rawlings had entered the apartment uninvited.

He was also given a concurrent three-month sentence for breach of probation connected with the wilful intent incident.

Police noticed Rawlings, who was required as a term of probation not to use alcohol, was intoxicated when arrested.

Rawlings had been put on two years' probation Oct. 11 for committing robbery with violence.

Judge Ostler recommended Rawlings serve his sentence in a forestry camp so he would be in a "healthy environment away from alcohol."

★ ★ ★

A 31-year-old man was given an extra 30-day jail sentence for failing to report to jail one weekend.

Brian Byers, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail.

Byers, serving a sentence on weekends for impaired driving, failed to appear at the jail Saturday morning.

He was arrested Sunday.

Judge Ostler told Byers, who was allowed to serve his inpaired driving sentence on weekends so it would not interfere with his work, "You seem to have a marked lack of appreciation for what the court gave you."

★ ★ ★

Lawrence Richard Graham Wilson, 23, of 1274 Centre, was given a 30-day jail term followed by six months' probation for committing two indecent acts.

Wilson had exposed himself to a 19-year-old woman Nov. 17 and to an 11-year-old girl the following day.

Both offences occurred in Saanich.

★ ★ ★

An order to abstain from consuming alcohol was one of the probation terms given to a 17-year-old youth for being drunk and creating a disturbance.

Timothy Albert Cucksey, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty Nov. 8. His probation period is for six months.

Cucksey was arrested Nov. 7 after he kicked and banged the door of Scott's Fine Foods, 650 Yates, when the manager refused him entrance.

Judge Ostler warned Cucksey of his use of alcohol and drugs, which was described in a presentence report.

Ostler ordered the report prepared when Cucksey first appeared on the charge Nov. 8.

Ostler had asked Cusksey "Don't you think you're a little young to be in that condition (at Scott's Fine Foods")

An Cusksey replied, "I've been doing it for a long time."

Salwa S. Sad, 29, of 306 Beckley, was fined $200 for shoplifting two eye-shadow crayons, two lipstick containers, tweezers, false eye lashes, a bottle of men's aftershave, and scissors from Shoppers Drug Mart, 1302 Douglas, on Friday. The items were worth $22.

★ ★ ★

A 21-year-old man whose car went out of control Nov. 23 and crashed through a fence, crossed a lawn and struck a house, was fined $300, put on probation for six months and banned from the road for two months.

Gary Jaginder Johal, 575 Marifield, was convicted of being in the care or control of a motor vehicle while impaired.

He was also ordered to pay a $50 fine for wilfully damaging a police cruiser taking him from the house at 211 Obed to the Saanich police station, and $40 compensation for the damage.

He had kicked the interior of the cruiser.

★ ★ ★

Daniel Nicholas Makow, 20, of 4075 Metchosin, received a one-week jail sentence for impaired driving Aug. 15, and another week for refusing a breath test.

★ ★ ★

Alfred Vaughan Henderson, 23, of HMCS Gatineau, was fined $350 and banned from driving for six months for impaired driving.

ESQUIMALT GETS PAPER

It will cover events in Esquimalt, Belmont Park and parts of Victoria West.

'Wilful Neglect' on BCR

The provincial government's refusal to intervene in the B.C. Railway labor dispute is an effort to reduce the company's operating loses, a Socred MLA charged Monday.

But Labor Minister Bill King said the charge, by Don Phillips (S. Peace) was "too irresponsible to comment on."

King reiterated that he had "no plans at the moment to intervene" in the 11-day dispute.

Earlier Phillips had said the government adopted a policy of "wilful and intentional neglect in refusing to take any action to bring parties together."

Phillips called for Premier Barrett, vacationing in Hawaii, to return and solve the situation and asked the people of B.C. to "bring pressure to bear for a solution by the government."

"The provincial government is in a position to try and cut losses by letting the railway sit idle because they know they will lose less money than if it were operational," said Phillips. "To start, they're off the hook on better than $3 million per month payroll."

He called for King to appoint an industrial inquiry commission to bring "the major crisis" to a conclusion.

"It is extremely odd, that with three cabinet ministers on the board of the BCR that this action has not already been taken."

Three members of the board are King, Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio responsible for northern affairs, and Premier Barrett.

Phillips said freight on the BCR has experienced a "drastic drop" resulting from forest industry problems and "this has had a serious effect on an already trouble picture."

Pro Boxla: Timing Bad, But Price May Be Right

If there are some puzzling inconsistencies regarding the future of the eastern-based professional National Lacrosse League, Jim Bishop is prepared to admit them. But he is also convinced that eventually it will be a success. "It's the finest sport in the world," he declared.

Bishop should be recalled here as the coach of the highly-successful Oshawa Green Gaels, for seven straight years, beginning in 1963 against the Tommy Druce - coached Shamrocks, junior champions of Canada in the boxla world. He is also executive vice-president of the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, and if some of the coaching changes there didn't work, that is another story.

What Bishop was here for on Monday was part of a western recruiting campaign by the NLL and his purpose was to advise Island players what benefits they could obtain and ask if they would be willing to allow their names to stand in the NLL draft.

It was the second phase of his western trip. On the weekend in Vancouver he was in the company with two other Eastern recruiters, both renowned for their playing talents, Jack Bionda and John Ferguson, and where 27 players were signed by the NLL. He had not finished interviewing city players when contacted here. (See news story).

One illogical part of the NLL approach, however, is one that Bishop freely admits, "Everything dictates that our timing couldn't be worse," he said.

He pointed to the demise of World Tennis, the financial woes of the World Football League, the recession and the backlash from the sports fan, his resentment to the high-priced athlete who doesn't perform to his capabilities, as prime examples. "But we feel it will go. Why? Because we feel we have solid entertainment at the right price and we have some great athletes, real superior athletes in the world's most demanding game."

A Deficit Operation in '74

That "right price" in most cities last year was $3 to $5 with Montreal having a $6 tops. Montreal, Philadelphia and Washington drew well enough, crowds of 10,000 attending playoffs in Montreal; but all clubs lost money and the other three clubs are on the move. Toronto is going to Long Island, Syracuse to Quebec City and Rochester to Boston or Indianapolis.

Salaries, too, are not in the magic five-figure bracket. The average top last season was around $6,500, which isn't bad for four months' work, and the low was $50 a game, "and not many got the low."

For next season, better news. All bona fide contracts of the 125 players in the league have been ripped up and new and more lucrative ones issued "even for those who weren't about to ask," said Bishop.

Now the ledger. Bishop feels to crystal-ball the clubs' positions "we could live with about a $200,000 loss, but not $500,000."

And as to why Toronto didn't make a success, Bishop quoted Harold Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens:

"It's a great game, but in order for it to survive in Toronto, it will have to go in the States first."

Which is where the future emphasis will be. "We will have TV coverage," Bishop stated. "Thirty-percent on a regional basis and selected live games on prime time on national TV."

No 'Walking-Around' Players

This was Bishop's 29th trip to the west coast and fittingly enough it came in his 29th year as a lacrosse coach or manager. And if he is considered as having revolutionized the game to a big extent, he explained that he originally got his ideas from the west.

"It was the western teams that were running," he explained. "I can remember Whitey Severson and Archie Browning, to name a few. They had the fast break, and even basketball patterns, which I later studied. I realized that the game shouldn't be players just walking around. I believed that you had to turn on the jets in lacrosse."

Although he had never played basketball, Bishop wrote away for instructional tapes of the Boston Celtics, studied them assiduously and applied them to lacrosse. Seven consecutive national titles is his testimonial.

"As for the west," he said, "strangely enough it reversed itself, gave up the fast break and adopted a control game."

And he's still for change, if it will help lacrosse. One of the innovations in the NLL last season was widening the nets by six inches. "Now the goalie must be an athlete, not just a fat man," he explained.

As to his personal future, he explained he was general manager with Toronto last season, has the same position with Long Island now but is going to Montreal. Which raised the question: What about Ferguson? "He's an owner," said Bishop.

With their background they should make a fine couple. The others they may have to worry about.

Bucks Cry Blues After Painful Loss

Chemainus Blues took period leads of 5-1 and 10-1 en route to a 14-1 romp over Ingraham Buckaroos in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game Monday at Memorial Arena.

Randy Johnson led the scorefest with three goals, double tallies were recorded by Don Smith, Darrel Hickson and Bert Steen and singles were added by Barry Adams, Dave Griff, Russ Kowaluk, George Ross and Vern Lambourne.

John Williams averted a shutout for Buckaroos.

Brian O'Neil and Ron Griffin combined to make 35 saves for Buckaroos while Spence Simmons only had to make 18 stops for Blues.

Breeze for Sentinel

VANCOUVER — Belmont topped Vancouver Island entries with a fourth-place finish as Sentinel of Vancouver ran away with the B.C. high school swimming and diving championships in the Canada Games Pool at the weekend.

Outstanding performances by international-class swimmers Stephen Pickell and Gail Amundrud helped Sentinel amass 513 points, for a whopping 349-poin margin over runner-up Prince of Wales.

Belmont did well in the relays and synchronized swimming to finish with 102 points while Mt. Douglas was fifth with 98 points.

Pickell was the best individual performer, setting national and provincial records in two of the four events he won. He set a national mark of 2:12.6 minutes in the 200-metre individual medley, a provincial standard of 53.4 seconds in the 100-metre freestyle and meet records in the 100-metre backstroke and 50-metre freestyle.

Miss Amundrud, a recent arrival from Ottawa, set new provincial marks in the 50-metre freestyle (27.3) and 100-metre freestyle (59.0).

Rob Grundison of Mt. Douglas led individual performers from the Island with a win in the 100-metre breaststroke, a second in the 100-metre freestyle and a third in the 100-metre butterfly.

Hall Only Rock Signed

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

A total of 37 British Columbia players, including three from Victoria, have indicated willingness to turn professional with the eastern-based National Lacrosse League.

But that doesn't mean that all 37 are guaranteed positions with the six teams in the NLL.

Demand and a "thoughtful" draft arrangement may keep the final recruitment figure to about 24.

Ready to give the pro league a whirl are Victoria players Chris Hall, Jeevan Dillon and Mike Walsh.

They were signed Monday by Jim Bishop, general manager of the Toronto team and a founder of the NLL. Bishop began recruiting B.C. players in Vancouver at the weekend and moved to Victoria Monday for a two-day visit.

Although players sign a "proper" contract, it is with the league and not individual teams.

"The players simply agree to be included in our draft," said Bishop. "It is a regular contract. However, the player must be drafted, try out and make the team before the contract takes effect.

"Our draft differs from hockey's in that the players are contacted first and, if agreeable, then drafted. That way, no team loses a draft."

Teams in the NLL last season were Maryland, Philadelphia, Montreal, Syracuse, Toronto and Rochester. Three of the existing franchises are expected to be shifted to new cities before next season.

Toronto expects to move to Long Island, Rochester to either Boston or Indianapolis and Syracuse to Quebec City.

Bishop's new recruits will join Jack Kastelien, Jim Lynch, Brian Thompson and Glen Neuman as former Victoria players in the pro league.

Several members of the Victoria Shamrocks team talked to Bishop but Hall was the only one signed.

Ivan Thompson, the Rocks' most valuable player for two of the past three seasons, was among the senior players who conferred with Bishop Monday. Ivan is not eligible for the open draft since his playing rights already belong to the Toronto team.

Bishop's discussions with Ivan centered on the possibility of signing with Toronto.

Other Shamrocks sounded out included goalkeepers George Grover and Skip Chapman, but neither expressed interest in playing pro.

Among the more prominent mainland players signed earlier were John Allen, Jerry Pinder, Jim Rickbeil, Dan Piotrowski and Art Talson, all of Coquitlam Adanacs; Ted Gernaey, Brian Davidson and Taki Vohalis of Vancouver Burrards; Bob Tasker and Ed Goss of New Westminster Salmonbellies, and graduating juniors Gary McLaughlin, Darryl McCall, Pete Guerin, Chuck Medhurst, Ron Pinder, Ron Safianuk, Brian Tasker, Vern Baker, Gord McNeill, Gordon Elliott and Randy Noble.

Dolphins Catch Super Bowl Vision Again

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Paul Brown watched Miami's defending National Football League champion Dolphins beat his Cincinnati Bengals 24-3 Monday night and said: "They're back in the Super Bowl swing."

The Dolphins, who have been in the last three Super Bowls and won the last two, agreed.

"This was our best performance of the year," said Miami coach Don Shula, whose team can win a fifth straight playoff berth by beating Baltimore Colts Sunday. The Dolphins, now with a 9-3 record are tied with Buffalo Bills for the American Conference East Division lead.

Quarterback Bob Griese, who completed 11 of 13 passes for 118 yards and threw four-yard scoring passes to Mercury Morris and Jim Mandich, said the Dolphins have the ability to excel in crucial games.

"It's nice to know when the chips are down and it's a big game, we're going to get it," said Griese.

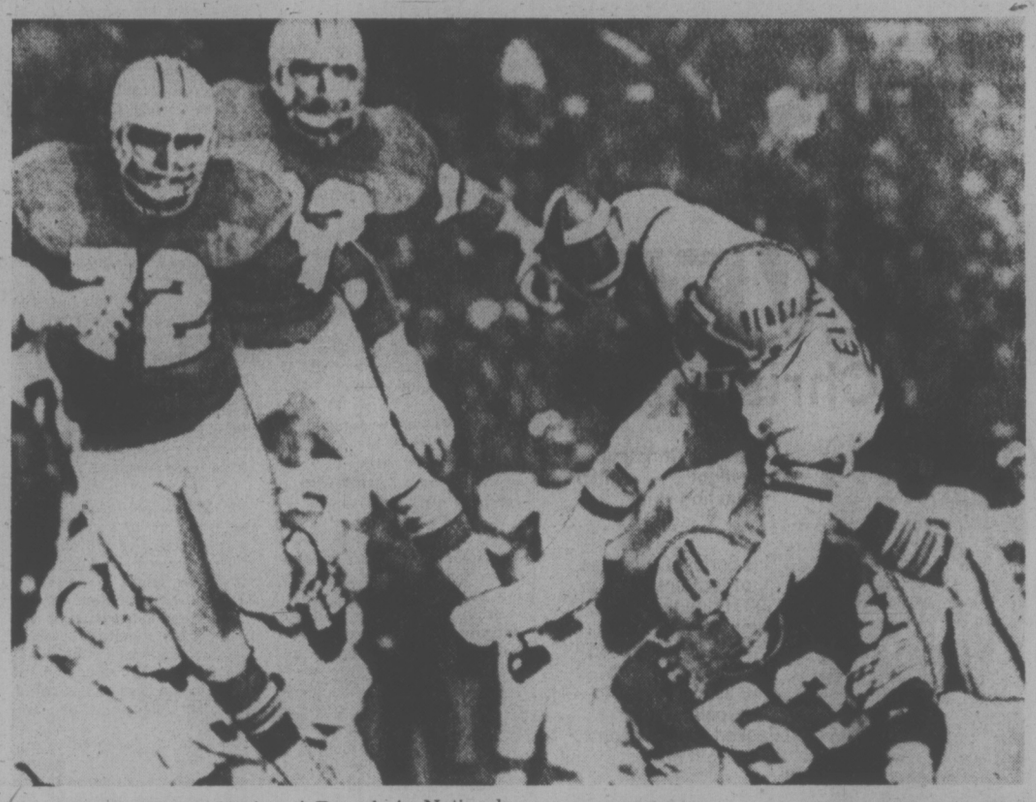
"This was just like a playoff game. We've been in a lot of big games when there's a feeling that it's a must game and we've got to execute, everything seems to fall into place. I guess it gets down to pride."

The Dolphins' defence held the Bengals to just 66 yards rushing, 61 of them in the second half. Ken Anderson, the AFC's leading passer, was held to 119 yards on 14 pass completions—100 yards below his average.

Cincinnati's biggest scoring threat was killed in the third quarter when Anderson was tackled by linebacker Bob Heinz for no gain on fourth down at Miami's four-yard line.

The Bengals' only score came on a 29-yard field goal by Horst Muhlmann after Morris fumbled at the Dolphins' 22. It was the only mistake made by the Dolphins, who recovered three of five Cincinnati fumbles.

The Dolphins got a 43-yard field goal from Garo Yepremian and ended the scoring with a two-yard run by Benny Malone in the fourth quarter.



LAST STRAW for Cincinnati Bengals in National Football League game Monday night in Miami was this fourth-quarter fumble by Lenvil Elliot. Ball squirts loose as Elliot is hit by Miami's Bob Metheson (53), who gets support from Bob Heinz and Vern Denherder. Dolphins recovered fumble and went on to 24-3 triumph over Bengals to boost chanees of reaching playoffs for Super Bowl berth. (AP Wirephoto)

The Only Thing Left for O.J. —An NFL Title

BUFFALO (AP) — When you're O. J. Simpson and have practically everything that pro football can offer, what is left?

To O. J., the pot at the end of the National Football League rainbow is not money, of which he has plenty, or fame, which he handles with nonchalance, or rushing records, which he broke frequently last season.

O. J.'s cherished goal, the one that has eluded him in his six seasons with the Buffalo Bills, is for the team to win the Super Bowl.

"I'd like to win the rushing championship this year, but it's a secondary goal," Simpson said Monday. "The first goal is the Suver Bowl."

O. J. and his teammates might get a shot at it. The Bills and Miami Dolphins are fighting for the East Division title of the American Football Conference. And even if the Dolphins should win that battle, the 9-3 Bills are in excellent position to grab a wild card berth in the NFL playoffs.

Getting into the playoffs and winning the Super Bowl would cap a dazzling football career for Simpson.

He came out of the University of Southern California with the Heisman Trophy as college football's outstanding player in the United States in 1969 and was the first draft pick of the Bills, who had won only one game in 1968.

For the next four seasons, Simpson played for a losing team. The low point was 1971 when the Bills won only one game and lost 13.

Then, last season the team began clicking and compiled a 9-5 mark, largely on the running of Simpson, who set a rushing record of 2,003 yards and cracked seven other NFL marks.

The Bills were a running team last year. This season, with good passing from second-year quarterback Joe Ferguson, they have a more balanced attack.

Even with the improved passing attack, Simpson has reeled off his third 1,000-yard plus rushing season in a row. He ran for 67 yards in Sunday's 6-0 victory over Baltimore Colts, giving him 1,004 yards this year.

But Simpson said his personal achievements mean little now that a shot at the league title looms.

"I'd like to do better," he said, "but the fact that we're 9-3 makes me satisfied with the season.

"Over-all, I'm happier this season than I was at this time last season.

"Getting 2,000 yards satisfied my ego personally and left me with only a few goals in football," he said. "In fact, getting the 2,000 yards narrowed down to one thing what I want to attain in football-playing on a championship team."

Rare Tennis Action

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Lawn Tennis Association, in a rare move, has admonished an umpire who defaulted Ilie Nastase in the semi-finals of the U.S. clay court championships last August at Indianapolis.

Nastase, ranking Romanian star, has drawn repeated fines and reprimands from the US-LTA for his stormy court behavior.

Besides the Indianapolis incident, he was fined $5,000 and reprimanded for his actions in two other tournaments in 1973 — the U.S. Indoor Open at Salisbury, Md., and the Western championships at Cincinnati.

At Indianapolis, the umpire, William Macassin, defaulted Nastase in a match with Raul Ramirez after the Romanian staged stalling tactics, hit a ball petulantly at his opponent and cursed the official in the chair.

The USLTA disciplinary committee, acting on a protest by Nastase's lawyers, admonished Macassin for leaving the umpire's chair in midmatch and failing to finish the scorecard.

Cougars Grab Date With Young Czechs

Victoria Cougars were quick to grab a plum off the international hockey table.

Unbeaten by Western Canada Hockey League rivals since Oct. 29, the Western Division leaders will play Czechoslovakia's "Young Olympics" team in an international exhibition at Memorial Arena on Jan. 2.

The Czech under 23-team, expected to provide the nucleus for the 1976 Olympic team, also will play Kamloops Chiefs on Jan. 1.

The games are the only ones the Czechs will play in Western Canada during a Canadian visit. Other contests have been scheduled against teams in the Ontario Major Junior League.

The Czechs visit was confirmed Monday by Victoria manager-coach Pat Ginnell.

He "doesn't think" the Cougars will bolster their lineup with additions from other WCHL teams.

"Why should we?" he asked. "We have the best team in our league. If we run into injuries, then I suppose I'd have to give thought to picking up one or two players."

Now riding a 13-game win streak, the hot Cougars concentrate their attentions tonight on New Westminster Bruins. Ernie McLean's always-rugged Bruins carry a five-game winning streak into the Memorial Arena game which starts at 8.

The Cougars will be bolstered by the return of defenceman Kim Clackson. The team captain, Clackson sat out Sunday's game, a 5-3 victory over Kamloops, as a result of a suspension imposed on the Victoria player early in the season.

Boxers Bounce Interior Squad

London Boxing Club had little trouble Monday night padding its lead in the Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

The Boxers, who won the league title last season, bounced last place Stevens Interiors 108-54 in one of two contests played at Royal Oak Junior High School.

In the other encounter, Victoria Junior Men nipped James Bay Athletic Association, 50-47.

Five players for Boxers reached double figures with Bob Wiley leading the way with 25 points, 19 in the first half. Duff McCaghey added 19 points, Jim McKay 16, Jack Robinson and Rich Connolly 14 each.

Jim Cunningham topped Stevens with 21 points while Rock Humber had 13 and Gary Woodburn 12.

In the other contest, Vic Junior Men got four points from Jack Munch and Steve Rothwell with less than 30 seconds remaining to edge James Bay.

Doug Irving hit for 15 points to lead the junior Men while Harry Hunter had 11 for James Bay.

FIRST WORLD BOWL THREATENED AS UNPAID PLAYERS QUIT PRACTICE

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Players of Birmingham Americans of the World Football League walked off the practice field Monday, refusing to practice until they received pay for their last five games.

The Americans are scheduled to ploy Florida Blazers in the WFL's first World Bowl here Thursday night. It was not clear today if the players would participate without the pay.

Coach Jack Gotta said, "I've had some low days, but this is one of the lowest.

"What they are trying to do is crucify football," he said.

The WFL Players' Association lawyer, Allen Miller, said of the walkout, "I had nothing to do with it.

"I know one thing," he said, "if players decide not to play in the World Bowl, it would be the last straw for the league.

"It would certainly kill attendance.'

Miller added: "I don't know what the players have in mind, but if it is a power move by them I think it is stupid, ill-advised and improper."

One player said a majority of the players "want to play in the championship game."

The Americans owe about $100,000 in city, county and state sales taxes and a local bank is asking for payment of some $750,000 on a loan.

Miller says he hopes that the situation will be resolved later today.

Phillies Get Staub In Three-Way Deal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Although all sides are denying it, Rusty Staub apparently now is a member of Philadelphia Phillies.

Staub, a New York Mets' outfielder for the last three National League baseball seasons, is part of a three-way deal which also includes Detroit Tigers, say sources at baseball's annual winter meetings.

The Phillies, also of the National League, have in turn sent catcher Bob Boone to the American League's Tigers. The Mets obtained centre fielder Mickey Stanley and relief pitcher Bill Slayback.

Staub, obtained from Montreal before the 1972 season, batted .258 with 19 home runs and 78 RBIs in 1974.

One major trade that was confirmed today sent Dick Allen, controversial slugger with Chicago White Sox, to Atlanta. The Braves sent cash and a player to be named later to the White Sox, contingent upon Allen ending his announced retirement and reporting to Atlanta for the 1975 season.

With the acquisition of Stanley, the Mets hope they have ended their search for a centre fielder. Stanley played in only 99 games for Detroit last year because of a broken hand and batted .221 with eight homers and 24 RBI.

Stanley, an outstanding fielder, had lost his centre field job to Ron LeFlore last season.

At the same time, the Tigers solved their catching problems with the acquisition of Boone, a veteran of two years in the majors. After hitting .261 with 10 home runs and 61 runs batted in as a rookie, he was .242 with three homers last season.

Slayback, a right-hander, appeared in 16 games with the Tigers last season and compiled a 1-3 record and a 4.75 ERA.

Confirmation of these deals was expected later today as major league baseball officials took up the subject of expansion.

Expansion was on the National League agenda with owners due to get a report from a special committee set up last August to study the possibility of additional clubs.

The majors already have indicated they will add two teams in each league for the 1976 season.

New Orleans and Seattle, which have domed stadiums under construction, and Toronto, which began renovation of its CNE Stadium last month, are considered leading candidates. Four separate groups from Toronto are here to bid for a franchise. Denver and Honolulu also have asked to be considered and have representatives here.

Washington, D.C., also is pressing for a franchise. In recent years, two clubs have been moved out of the nation's capital, which may wind up with the Baltimore club which is up for sale. It's possible the team would play a split season at Baltimore and Washington.

Approval of expansion is not expected at these meetings.

Flames Fade at the Forum

MONTREAL (CP) — For the first time since the 1972-73 National Hockey League season, Montreal Canadiens have defeated Atlanta Flames at the Forum.

The Flames had two wins and two ties against the Canadiens at Montreal but lost 2-0 in the only NHL game Monday night.

Defenceman Larry Robinson scored both Montreal goals and goaltender Michel Larocque stopped 22 shots to record his first shutout of the season.

"Both teams checked closely tonight," said Montreal coach Scotty Bowman.

"Atlanta checks well. You have to play tight against them."

"All the wings were coming back tonight," said Robinson. "That helps us on defence.

"Our forwards were not taking any foolish chances and they were not getting caught up."

Robinson gave Montreal a 1-0 lead at 10:33 of the first period after taking a pass from Peter Mahovlich and firing a hard shot past Atlanta goaltender Daniel Bouchard.

The Montreal defenceman added his second goal of the night and fourth of the year with less than five minutes to go in the second period.

Referee Ron Wicks called 36 minutes in penalties, including a game misconduct to Atlanta's Eric Vail.

Vail and Montreal's Doug Risebrough also got majors after Risebrough and Bouchard tangled near the Atlanta goal. Vail was ejected for being third man into that altercation.

Atlanta lost defenceman Randy Manery late in the first period when he suffered a sprained ankle when checked heavily into the boards by rookie Risebrough.

The victory moved Montreal into a first-place tie with Los Angeles Kings in the Norris Division. The Kings have a 12-2-9 record while Montreal is 13-6-7.

Atlanta is 13-8-5, two points behind first-place Philadelphia Flyers in the Patrick Division.

In games tonight, Vancouver Canucks are at home to Minnesota North Stars, California Seals visit St. Louis Blues and Buffalo Sabres are at Washington Capitals.

Refs' Blunder Saves Sonics

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Seattle's Fred Brown was like a dazed fighter trapped in a corner Monday night.

But his maneouvre may have saved the SuperSonics' 110-106 victory over the Kansas City Omaha Kings in the only professional basketball game scheduled.

There was 1:40 remaining with Seattle holding a 109-104 lead in the National Basketball Association contest but Kansas City-Omaha was applying the pressure.

Brown called time out after he had received an inbound pass and dribbled into the corner of his backcourt as two Kings closed off the passing lanes.

Referee Paul Mihalek took the ball from Brown and signaled time out, then realized it was an illegal call in the last two mintes. The Sonics breezed down the court and the Kings' momentum was wiped out.

"That call had a great deal to do with it (the loss)," Kings' coach Phil Johnson said after the game. "The referee is just not supposed to acknowledge it."

Brown had hit 10 of 18 shots and scored 23 points, including Seattle's final five points. Archie Clark was seven for 11 and Spencer Haywood made 10 of 20 and finished with 26 points.

Gymnasts Eye Games Berths

Two Victoria gymnasts have grabbed commanding positions and three other Victorians are strong contenders in competition to decide berths on the British Columbia team that will compete in the 1975 Canada Winter Games at Lethbridge in February.

Jill Weinberg and Brent Scott turned in impressive displays at Vancouver during the weekend in the first of two qualifying tests for the provincial squad.

Jill placed first all-round in the women's section while another city athlete, Rayanne Petterson, earned the seventh spot.

Brent wound up second all-round in the men's division as Peter Allen and Rob Gatehouse placed sixth and eighth.

Six women and six men will be selected to the B.C. team following the second qualifying competition, to be held Dec. 14 at North Vancouver Community Centre.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a classic one in the field of "safety plays." When it arose many years ago in a team-of-four match, one of the two South declarers came up with the correct play. The other did not. It is your job, as a bridge detective, to isolate the mistake committed by the losing South declarer.

Both sides vulnerable.
North deals.

SOUTH
♠ J 10 9 3 2
♥ A K 7
♦ A J 2
♣ 7 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♥.

At both tables, the final contract was three no-trump, with South as declarer. In each case, West opened the heart five, and East's jack was captured by South's king. Then came a parting of the ways.

At the first table, declarer led the six of clubs at trick two, and when West followed with the three-spot, dummy's jack was inserted. The jack won the trick — but with West still possessing a sure stopper in clubs, it became impossible for declarer to cash more than three club tricks.

When the deal was replayed, our second South declarer also led the club six at trick two. But this South declarer did not insert dummy's jack. Instead, he played the board's deuce!

With East failing to follow suit on the initial club lead, the club situation was now an open book. Declarer next led his remaining club and finessed dummy's jack, with the assurance that the jack would win the trick. Seven club tricks — and 10 tricks in all—were now there for the taking.

Our second South declarer played the hand correctly; our first one did not. With the success of the contract being declarer's primary concern, our errant South declarer should have recognized that he needed six club tricks (not seven) to fulfill his contract. Therefore he should have set his sights on the best way of making six club tricks.

When West followed suit to the initial club lead, by playing dummy's deuce South would be assured of making six club tricks. If East had won the trick with the nine-spot (in theory), there would be but two clubs remaining in the defenders' hands. Upon regaining the lead, South would cash dummy's ace and king, to bring home the contract.

ROLLING STONE

A mummified black hobo buried in Dallas has gotten a headstone for his unmarked grave thanks to Don McLean's song, "The Legend of Andrew McCrew," off his new album, Homeless Brother.

Spurred by listener reaction to the song Roy Leonard of Chicago's WGN called Elgie Pace, a vocational nurse who buried the legendary "Mummy Man" in 1973.

Andrew McCrew was a one-legged hobo who died falling off a freight train in Marlin, Texas, in 1913. His body was taken to a funeral home, where it was embalmed pending relatives' claims. The relatives never materialized, and after several years members of a carnival troupe spirited off the body (now mummified), dressed it in a tuxedo, and billed McCrew as the "Amazing Petrified Man,"

For 40 years after his death, McCrew reigned as a leading carnival attraction. When the carnival began to lose money, it sold McCrew's remains.

In 1964, McCrew was found in a Houston warehouse by Mrs. Pace's sister-in-law's brother-in-law, who gave the mummy to Mrs. Pace. After keeping it in her basement for a number of years, she arranged to bury McCrew in May, 1973. Meanwhile, the Dallas County Board of Health suspended Mrs. Pace's nursing licence on the pretext of her keeping a dead body in her basement. A widow and mother of two children, Mrs. Pace was forced to seek work as a teacher to nurse's aides. She is, however, delighted by the effect of McLean's song.

While cruising through the flats of Flushing (Queens), New York, Eric Clapton noticed a crowd milling in front of a local high school. Discovering that a homecoming hop was in progress, Clapton burst upon the scene and climbed right up on stage to jam with the band. "Hi, I'm Eric Clapton," he said. "Sure ya are, heh heh, sure . . ." To lend his performance a little credibility, Clapton ran down a few of his rather astonishing guitar licks. Still, no one believed him. Stunned, Clapton phoned pal Gregg Allman and told him what was happening in this crazed Flushing crepe-papered maw of non-recognition. Then he climbed back up on the bandstand and played "Layla." His credibility restored, Clapton suffered immediate reflex boredom and split into the dark Gotham night.

Regional EPC Director Named

A. H. John Blake of Ottawa will be in Victoria Jan. 1 to take over as regional director, Emergency Planning Canada, for British Columbia.

Blake succeeds M. R. Harries, who is retiring after 4½ years with the EPC.

BLAKE

Blake will work closely with federal and provincial government agencies involved with civil defence. The agencies include the Provincial Emergency Program, which is responsible for provincial government activities concerned with peacetime emergencies in B.C.

Blake retired from the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1965, joining the Canada Emergency Measures Organization, where he was chief of the national radiological defence program until 1970. He was later appointed chief of National Program Evaluation, the section responsible for development of a computer-based management information system.

In 1972, he was put in charge of developing and coordinating peacetime and wartime preparation exercises as chief of Canada's EMO's exercise division.

Blake has been acting as deputy director, plans and analysis branch, since Emergency Planning Canada was formed earlier this year and federal planning for disaster preparation reorganized.

14 ARTISTS IN EXHIBIT

Starting Thursday and continuing through Dec. 22, works by 14 selected Greater Victoria and Gulf Islands artists will be displayed at the Emily Carr Art Centre, 207 Government St.

Oils, water colors, silk screen and graphics will be shown by Gladys Boaz, Mary Corneille, Gwen Farquhar, Nita Flick, Les Harper, Hyslop Ingham, Peggy Larson, Pat Luchinsky, Ruby Pearson, Russel Potter, Kay Ratcliffe, Lillian Rogers, Bessie Snider and Joyce Swannell.

The exhibition hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

The display will not be shown Dec. 13, which is Emily Carr's birthday. For this occasion, the exhibition will be taken down to accommodate an anniversary celebration and open house for members and invited guests.

At the first annual general meeting of the Carr Centre Society held last week, a slate of all-women officers was elected as a salute to the forthcoming International Women's Year of 1975 UNESCO program.

Elected were Rosalie Bowie, president; Shirlee Plater, vice-president; Donna Schroter, secretary; Kay Neilson, treasurer, and Nell Skuce, Winn Mitchell, Geline Belanger and Henriette Reid, directors.

Those beautifully-wrapped Christmas presents could come apart at the airport if travellers try to carry them aboard as hand baggage, Air Canada district manager S. G. Mooney said today.

"All hand baggage is subject to being opened by security guards — even Christmas presents," he said.

Mooney said presents are not opened, however, if they are placed inside luggage that is checked aboard.

He said the purpose of the security search is to assure that a potential hijacker does not carry a weapon on his person. Material inside suitcases that cannot be reached by passengers during flight is of less concern.

"This does not mean that all Christmas presents carried aboard will be opened—but it could happen and it would be an unfortunate situation."

If presents must be carried aboard they should be lightly wrapped with a lid that can be easily removed so the contents can be inspected, he said.

Mooney stressed that the security guards are instructed to inspect any suspicious-looking item and Christmas presents with metalic wrapping paper give off a warning signal on the electronic scanning devices.

The regulation applies to all flights, even for the short hop to Vancouver.

Meanwhile, space on airlines over the Christmas holiday is just about completely booked although a few seats are still available, Mooney said.

Sunshine flights are just about 100 per cent sold out but there is some space on flights to Canadian points, although possibly not on the exact date a traveller might wish.

The Christmas flight season stretches from Christmas Eve through New Years Day.

Air Canada has scheduled 25 extra flights out of Vancouver to the Prairies and eastern Canada during that period but this additional space is almost all booked.

Mooney said the vast majority of travellers are coming to realize they have to book before the end of November to be assured to space.

TRUEIT
. . . time to be wary

Man's Home Diminishes As Castle

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It is one of the quirks of the Canadian Criminal Code that conviction for breaking and entering a person's home may be punishable by up to life in prison while conviction of breaking into other places such as a store or a bank carries a maximum penalty of 14 years.

The penalties are "all out of proportion," a judge in Victoria concedes, but hastily adds they demonstrate how seriously the ever-familiar house "b and e" should be considered.

That no one, to his knowledge, has ever received the maximum sentence is beside the point.

The law, he suggests, merely reflects and supports an age-old principle that a man's home is his castle — inviolable to intrusion.

The sad truth is that principle is being flouted daily . . . and never so much as during the month of December.

Police departments are swamped with reports. If last year's statistics ring true, this year between three to four Greater Victoria homes will be broken into each day during the coming month.

It is a time to be especially wary, Det. Insp. Charles Trueit of the Saanich police force cautions.

He warns if you are going out at night leave some lights on, perhaps a radio left running, and . . . be sure to lock up behind you.

During daylight hours — and as many if not more break-ins occur then as during darkness — you can help your neighbours by reporting to police if you see any suspicious people approaching homes or loitering on the street.

"People shouldn't feel embarrassed contacting us . . . we'll respond to any call, even if it is placed anonymously," he says.

Who's committing the break-ins is anyone's guess, though juveniles figure in many, perhaps in some areas, the majority.

Three juvenile boys are now before the court charged with 30 recent break-ins in Saanich.

Two weeks ago, four juvenile boys were charged with 11 break-ins in Esquimalt.

Chief John Green of Oak Bay estimates juveniles are responsible for two out of every three reports of crime in his municipality.

Trueit says parents "have to be a little suspicious" if their child brings home goods which he claims he "found" or received in a "trade" with a friend.

"The majority of parents haven't a clue what their kids are up to when they are away from home.

"And when they find out their son or daughter has been picked up by police they are shocked, completely taken aback . . . and most really cooperate with us in trying to straighten out the child.'

'Parents Haven't a Clue'

He attributes juvenile crime to idleness.

"Kids have inquisitive minds. They watch a police story on TV and wonder 'what would happen if I did it?' They're looking for a new experience, for adventure, and the act gives them status with their peers."

However, Trueit says, it would be unfair to blame juveniles for all house break-ins.

Drug addicts and hardened criminals account for many, he says, but how many and in what proportion, there is no way to tell.

Police generally feel the courts are not providing sufficient deterrence in sentencing.

There is little the juvenile court can do other than set a probation term, perhaps a small restitution order and encourage the child to mend his ways.

But, Trueit wonders, is that enough?

He cites the recent rash of house break-ins in Saanich and says one of the juveniles picked up was already on remand for sentencing with respect to an earlier, separate charge of breaking and entering.

This kind of recidivism is common, he suggests.

In adult court, conviction of breaking and entering a dwelling house seldom results in a jail sentence for the first offender and usually only a two to three-year term for the repeater.

"We are guided by decisions handed down by the Court of Appeals," a provincial court judge says. "And we try to be consistent with what they set."

In recent unpublished cases, the Appeals Court reduced a five-year sentence imposed by a trial judge to three years; in another case a two-year sentence was halved; in another a three-year term was cut to two.

The judge says the heaviest sentence he could recall ever being upheld by the Appeals Court was a 10-year term handed down to a man "with an atrocious criminal record".

He agrees those sentences are a long way off the maximum permitted under the law.

"It is probably a symptom of the times . . . our social direction is reflected in the sentences," he says.

But the muscle is still there if the courts choose to use it and, police officers like Insp. Trueit believe if more people were aware of the possible prison consequences, maybe . . . just maybe . . . there would be fewer house break-ins.

Oil Spill Plans Studied

Esquimalt taxpayers will spend $5,000 next year on equipment to fight oil spills if municipal council ratifies a recommendation by its public works committee.

An oil spill contingency plan drawn up by municipal engineer M. H. Campbell was presented committee members and approved at a meeting Monday.

Although both government and private industry try to avoid oil spills, "mishaps are inevitable despite the most stringent controls," said Campbell in the report.

"It is essential that Esquimalt have its own contingency plan for the protection of our waterfront and the clean-up of our shorelines should contamination occur," he said.

"The responsibility for combatting oil spills on the sea lies with the federal government." he said.

Equipment is available at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt to deal with spilled oil before it gets to the beaches.

"The place to fight oil spills is on the sea," said the report. "Once the oil reaches land the clean-up problem become very expensive and the results are not too successful."

The $5,000 worth of equipment proposed includes walkie-talkies, gloves, rope, chicken wire, gunny sacks, radar lights, a life raft and "Warning — Oil — Keep off Beach" signs.

Work Site Hinders Disabled

City aldermen indicated today there is nothing they can do to ease the problems of two handicapped employees of the provincial government, who are finding it difficult getting to and from work in the B.C. Hydro building on Blanshard.

The two employees used to have reserved spaces on the Hydro parking lot adjoining the building, but that land is now the construction site for a major extension to the building.

Robert Siddall, the architect for the project, suggested the city of Victoria allow part of the boulevard on the east side of the street to be asphalted as a special parking bay.

This would provide one parking space immediately outside the building and another across the sidewalk on the present boulevard area.

But the traffic and public works committee today recommended council turn down the proposal.

A report from traffic engineer Dave Campbell noted that granting permission in this instance would set an unfortunate precedent "by allowing vehicles to make special use of our landscaped boulevards for parking."

Apart from which, Campbell said, allowing the vehicles to back onto Blanshard could prove "hazardous."

Committee chairman Ald. Alf Hood suggested the solution is for the government department concerned to arrange for the employees to park in a regular parking lot as close to the building as possible, and then transport them to and fro.

Camosun Okays Budget Hike, Leaves Cut Up to Province

An operating budget for 1975-76 up 58 per cent over the current one was approved by Camosun College council Monday with only one dissenting vote.

Council decided that if anyone should determine how much the $7.8 million budget must be cut, it should be the provincial government.

"I see this as the council's abdicating almost entirely this area of fiscal responsibility," said Bill Ross, who voted against the budget.

"We are going to become an anachronism and a complete waste of time . . .," Ross warned. "We must submit a responsible budget."

"None of the other colleges are cutting their budgets," council chairman Dr. Hal Knight countered. "They're putting them in as they're prepared."

Other colleges have submitted budget increases ranging between 32 and more than 100 per cent, he said, so Camosun's increase isn't out of line "if that's any comfort."

"It isn't," replied Ross.

He proposed an amendment to curb spending the non-vocational areas of the budget, but no one seconded the amendment.

Councillor Lavinia Greenwood proposed raising student fees from $125 to $150 per semester to provide more revenue, but her amendment was defeated.

Local taxes will have to raise $1.3 million of the approved budget, and that would hike the mill rate from the present .97 mills to more than 2 mills.

Ross asked how the four other school trustees on Camosun council could fight to control spending in the school board's provisional budget and not do the same for Camosun's.

"We do one thing in one area and over here we do exactly the opposite,' he said.

Knight pointed out that Greater Victoria School District has a declining enrolment, whereas Camosun's is expected to rise by 30 per cent next fall.

At the same meeting, council agreed to write Premier Dave Barrett, in his capacity of finance minister, urging reform of the budgeting system for community colleges.

Colleges like Camosun had to submit their provisional budgets for 1975-76 last June, compared with school boards who submitted theirs last month.

This month colleges must submit their final budgets, without knowing how much the provincial legislature will vote to allot to community colleges next spring.

ROY ROAD SEWER DELAYED

Paperwork has delayed a Saanich decision on whether to increase its sewer system to make way for the proposed Roy Road subdivision.

The matter was to be debated at Monday's council meeting.

Mayor Ed Lum, however, said debate would have to be postponed until the next council meeting to allow the municipal staff to prepare the necessary papers.

Four years in the planning, Saanich acquired the Roy Road land with the intent of selling the lots at cost for single-family dwellings.

The provincial government, however, wants to have a mixture of townhouses and single-family dwellings.

The provincial government plans development on the ratio of 20 persons per acre while Saanich considers 6.4 persons per acre a "more realistic figure", according to Mayor Ed Lum.

To meet the provincial government density ruling, the sewer capacity in that area will have to be increased.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the largest member of the deer family? R.T.

A. The moose. It is larger than any deer that lived in past ages. Some animals grow 7½ feet high at the shoulder and weigh from 1,500 to 1,800 pounds. Moose are found on the mainland but not on Vancouver Island.

Q. Can you tell me which is Canada's largest province? B.T.

A. Quebec is the largest with 523,860 square miles; Ontario is second and B.C. third, but the Northwest Territories beats them all with a total of more than 1.2 million square miles.

Educator Dies After Accident

Bill Reid, superintendent of field personnel for the provincial education department, died Monday.

Reid, 58, of 2060 Frederick Norris Rd., had been in the Royal Jubilee Hospital undergoing treatment for injuries received in a boating accident Sept. 15.

Reid had been principal at Lansdowne junior secondary school and teacher and vice-principal at Esquimalt senior secondary school before joining the education department in 1956.

Born in Victoria, he attended Oaklands elementary school and Victoria high school and got his B.A. from the University of B.C.

He fought with the Seaforth Highlanders in the Second World War in Sicily and Italy, and after the war got his Masters degree from the University of Washington.

In 1960 he became district superintendent in Delta, and in 1964 returned to Victoria to become chief inspector of schools.

He is survived by his wife Milva, sons James of Victoria, William of Vancouver, and Robert, a University of Victoria student, and one daughter, Mrs. D. H. Wilson of Anacortes.

All-Weather Pitch Plan

An all-weather soccer pitch is planned for the Cordova Bay area.

Mayor Ed Lum told Saanich council Monday the provincial department of highways has agreed to lease property, adjacent to the municipality's gravel pit, for $1 a year.

Family in Limbo Finds a Reprieve

By PAT DUFOUR

Remember the Hickies?

What happens to a couple that buys a home for a 10-member family only to have it condemned as unfit to live in?

For more than two months, Everett and Georgina Hickie and their eight children have been living a nomadic existence, being moved from motel to motel as space became available. They cannot live in the house — on which they put a $2,000 down payment and took over payments on a furnace. They also bought assorted other fixtures.

Those weeks of being cooped up in two motel rooms have taken their toll.

This week, the first ray of help has broken. They've been assigned a public housing unit.

It's too small for their family. They know it. But it's better than not knowing from day to day where they are going to be moved next.

But the father who's striven so hard to get a home together isn't there to help.

Plagued by worry, his health is broken. Everett Hickie was taken to hospital Sunday.

Since early October Hickie and his wife have tried to keep their worry from the children as much as they can — despite the family of 10 living in close quarters.

Hickie has seen his one-man construction business fail; customers going elsewhere when he couldn't meet commitments because of sessions with inspectors, other officials and lawyers.

In between an endless round of meetings, Hickie has had to find time to pick up his children, scattered around in three different schools as their address kept changing.

Stress on the children has also taken its toll. One teenager is too worried to attend classes. Her teacher has advised she be kept out of school for a while.

Another child has been admitted into the Eric Martin Institute for care.

Both under doctor's care for weeks, her parents need pills to sleep. Sometimes, even these don't help. Mrs. Hickie is afraid to take too many. She took too many one night. It nearly proved fatal.

This week, however, she is the strong one in the family.

Day by day, she is moving her family's belongings, with the help of a friend.

Their money has run out so that the old truck the family uses can't get through the testing station. The friend is supplying transportation.

The housing unit isn't the solution to the Hickies' problem.

Eventually, the cramped quarters will also lead to more problems.

But, for now, it promises some sort of stability and that isn't something they've known since the hassle over the house began.

Small as it is, it will provide some semblance of the home they're denied — a temporary oasis after the harrowing weeks of indecision.

The home which is now denied them.

USE COMPETENCE, NOT AGE FOR RETIREMENT—DOCTOR

CHICAGO (UPI) — An American Medical Association editor says mandatory retirement laws should be based on a person's competence not his age.

Robert H. Moser, M.D., editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, wrote in a column that "there is an urgent need for federal support of the elderly 'well' on a scale comparable to that provided the elderly 'ill.'"

Mosher's comment was on a friend-of-the-court brief filed by Bernard D. Hirsh, AMA general counsel, in a suit filed by Martin O. Weisbrod against the secretary of housing and urban development, seeking a summary judgment that the federal employee mandatory retirement law is unconstitutional. The AMA said the case has been dismissed by a federal court, and the dismissal is now being appealed.

"In the opinion of the American Medical Association, any decision for or against retirement should rest on the same fundamentals as does a decision for or against hiring:" said the brief, "the individual's desire to work; and the individual's ability to work.

Youngster Finds a Way

COQUITLAM (CP) — A lot of beer drinkers have given a determined 13-year-old Coquitlam youngster a chance to supplement his academic interest in the people of France with a first-hand experience.

Ken Blanthorne had the will and found the way to make his ambition of a trip to France a reality.

He launched a one-man soft drink and beer bottle drive and three months later has collected a cheque for $524 and $30 in cash for the 925 cases of beer bottles he had gathered. He also received $185 from empty soft drink bottle returns.

Ken now will be able to finance a 15-day study tour of France with 20 of his classmates at Sir Frederick Banting Junior Secondary School during Easter vacation next spring.

Aided by his neighbor, Mrs. Marcie Griswold, who helped ferry the bottles to the depot, Ken earned the money his family just couldn't afford to give him.

Satisfaction Tops In Women's Poll

WINNIPEG (CP) — Personal satisfaction is considered more important than a high salary or job security by women and high school students, says a survey conducted by the women's bureau branch of the provincial government.

The report disclosed that job enjoyment received the most support on a questionnaire distributed in a local high school and in homes in a designated area determined to portray a stable working community.

Although more than three-quarters of the women interviewed earned less than $2.50 an hour at semi-skilled or unskilled jobs, and a large percentage of the high school students were undecided about their working future, lob satisfaction received the highest priority.

Women's bureau Director Mary Eady said the area chosen represents an accurate corss-section of the work force.

"Incomes are not high. Just over 51 per cent of annual family incomes range from $5,800 to $10,000, and the community lacks many of the educational and recreational facilities existing in most other city areas, but community pride and co-operative spirit is high."

Mrs. Eady said the objective of the survey was "to develop a program of out-reach services for women in a geographically defined area" and to discover employment patterns, needs, and concerns affecting women.

The questionnaire requested information regarding wives' income, educational levels of husband and wife, need for child care, and types of work desired. A second segment of the questionnaire investigated attitudes toward employment, work and familial relationships.

A substantial portion of the women interviewed expressed a desire to return to the work force either on a part-time or full-time basis.

Of the 35 per cent of women at home who voiced intentions of returning to the work force, 56.1 per cent wanted part-time employment Most of the women questioned were between 20 and 49 years of age.

More than 66 per cent of the replies indicated women believed they must work to augment the family income for essential household goods. More than 77 per cent thought women were equally suited for managerial, professional, or administrative posts, while equal pay for equal work received the overwhelming support of 88 per cent.

Mrs. Eady said the report will provide valuable information to deal with the problems facing women in modern society.

It will be of value "to us in assessing how we can best serve women, to the women themselves in judging how much support they an expect from their colleagues in the community and in government, and to prospective employers to indicate that women expect of working conditions now."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast: Wednesday, Dec. 4

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): You "make contact" with young person. You also find outlet for creative abilities. You gain co-operation from one who can help in fulfilling desires. Welcome chance for change, variety, possible travel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home environment becomes more pleasant. Visitor surprises with humor, perhaps a gift. Question of property and its worth can be settled. Older individual is willing to lend benefit of experience. Be receptive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis is on exploration. Examine various data. Test ideas, theories. Be willing to step beyond what appears to be a limitation. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — could be in picture. Neighbor or relative presents factual data.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Discussions concerning money, personal possessions are likely to be on agenda. Be ready to make changes, inquiries. Answers are available — if you ask. Gemini, Virgo persons could be involved.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Lunar cycle is such that you make amends for past mistakes. You see clearly. Your personality sparkles. Showmanship takes over and many are drawn to you. One you love makes gesture of reconciliation. Toss aside pride and accept!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): All is clandestine, behind the scenes, subtle — a labyrinth rather than a direct course. Know it and realize being able to tread lightly is important. You get what you want only through whisper, not shouts. Messages will be clarified and Pisces will aid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on friendship, money that works for you and special business interests. Involvement is obvious — if you try to hide it you could appear foolish. Member of opposite sex is very much in picture. It is better to say "no comment" rather than directly deny. You'll see!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A business venture is completed. Means you finish arrangements now or forget it. One who hangs on and sings blues has outlived usefulness. Know it and do something about it. Direct assertion on your part is overdue. Aries, Libra may be in picturre.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good Moon aspect coincides now with travel, education, stimulation of learning process. You are inspired by one who is creative, aggressive and willing to back beliefs with actions. A new start — and proverbial second chance — could make this a memorable time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Collect needed information, material. Check with family member. You'll need backing — get it before making final commitment! Another Capricorn — and a Cancer — figure prominently. Be aware of resources — don't sell yourself short.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Lie low. Obtain hint from Capricorn message Deal with legal types. Means get picture of what stands in way, what is clear sailing. Those who oppose your views are very willing to compromise. Know it and play cards close to chest.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): You may do some tearing down for purpose of reconstruction. There are some, apparently your friends, who are sincere but misinformed. Know it and don't break diet, health resolutions. Work associate has constructive suggestion. Listen — and express gratitude.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, were on your own early in sense that you were not part of peer group. You started something this year which really will bear fruit in two years. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play significant roles in your life. You are high-principled, fond of travel and have an abundance of creative energy.

Disarming Remark

DEAR ABBY: When an interested person asks a question that you consider too personal to answer, what's so smart about making a coarse reply like: "If I thought it was any of your business, I'd tell you," or, "If you'll forgive me for not answering, I'll forgive you for asking?"

Does it boost the replier's ego to imply that the questioner was stupid? How would you like to be disarmed by such a remark?

What's wrong with a simple reply like, "I appreciate your interest but I'd rather not talk about it," and then switching the subject to something less disturbing?—Civilized

DEAR CIV: Why thank the questioner for his "interest" when his interest is clearly nosiness? ("Why did your daughter and her husband get divorced?" Or, "What's your husband's take-home pay?" Or, "Do you dye your hair?") How does one really "appreciate such interest?"

You're 50 per cent right, however. "I'd rather not talk about it" is an adequate reply.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this away without answering because it's no joke. I'm a guy whose nipples protrude very, very conspicuously. They show through my shirts, and people are always making remarks like, "Hey, you need a bra." However, the fact is, my chest is not unusually large — just my nipples.

Several years ago I read that mothers who wanted to breast-feed their babies were advised to pull on their nipples so they would protrude, and their infants could nurse more easily. I remember now that when I was a kid (in about the sixth grade) I had a habit of doing that unconsciously while I studied.

I would appreciate it if you would consult some authority on how to get my nipples back to normal, if it's possible. — Self-conscious.

DEAR SELF: Two suggestions: Cover them with tape to flatten. Or have the protrusions surgically reduced by a plastic surgeon.

DEAR ABBY: For the last five years I've been very much in love with a widowed grandmother, age 61. I am 60, and in the process of getting a divorce in order to marry my lady friend. Now, the problem:

When my lady and I dine, she orders "a martini" before dinner. I have one, also, but she always has a second, and then a third.

She enjoys wine with her dinner. I order a bottle, and she drinks most of it. After dinner she likes not one after-dinner drink, but two.

When we are at her place, the bottle is always out, and she "relaxes" with "a few drinks." When we're at my place, she always helps herself to the liquor.

She never gets drunk or out of line, but she seems to be drinking a great deal of the time.

The shocker came when I accidentally discovered a nearly empty vodka bottle on the shelf of her bedroom closet. (It was hidden behind a hat box.)

I asked her what it was doing there and she said her doctor said she should have a little drink before going to bed every night.

Abby, do you think she's an alcoholic? I care for her, and want to know if she has a drinking problem before I marry her. How can I find out for sure? She insists she can take it or leave it alone. — Worried.

DEAR WORRIED: You have good reason to worry. Tell her of your concern, and suggest that if she can take it or leave it alone, you'd like her to leave it alone for a while. Her reaction to your suggestion should tell you all you need to know.

Hams See Each Other family

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

Remember all that talk about phone-o-vision a few years ago? The glowing projections that you'd be able to both talk to and see the person on the other end of your telephone connection . . . and, in turn, be talked to and seen by that individual? Well, forget it. Ma Bell just announced that she was phasing out the last tests of such a system and she has no intention of reviving the idea.

On the other hand, a small but growing number of ham radio operators are already talking to and looking at each other regularly at any time they choose.

The equipment that makes this possible is something called Slow-Scan TV, or SSTV. With such a rig, an amateur radio operator can transmit electronic images wherever his or her voice will travel on high frequency gear. Anyone who receives the image will see a new picture "painted" on a screen once every eight seconds. It's a little like listening to a friend talk about something while he shows you a series of snapshots that illustrate the conversation.

Copthorne Macdonald — who lives in Rochester, Minnesota — is the dynamic young man who pioneered SSTV. And Cop has some definite ideas about who should have access to this new "tool" of communication.

"We've got to keep the big guys from getting control of this development," says Macdonald. "I want to see SSTV put directly into the hands of the little people, so that we can all begin to work out the planet's problems together.

"Imagine a Montana rancher having his first 'face-to-face' talk with a New York City black man through an SSTV-equipped ham radio hookup. Or think about the way it would expand your view of the world if you could directly compare your outlook on current events with the opinion of a Canadian or a New Zealander. How well does Sweden's welfare state really work? What does an Israeli think of U.S. internal problems?"

Cop goes on. "A network of SSTV hams could make really meaningful options available in the field of education. For example, a farmer in Oregon could hold free organic gardening classes every day at noon on one particular frequency and interested individuals and groups all over the country could both watch and participate.

"SSTV can even be valuable in bringing issues before the public in roundtable discussions . . . give-and-take 'town meetings' in which tens or hundreds of people around the country — or around the world — carry on an animated discussion.

"Our world is in deep trouble," says Copthorne. "There has never been a greater need for people to share their thoughts and ideas with each other. Slow-Scan TV is do-it-yourself, audio-visual dialogue with each individual deciding what part of his life he wants to share. SSTV makes it easy and natural to step into another person's life . . . if he wants to let us in and to share his feeling with us."

Well, it's one thing to dream about what your "baby" can do . . . and quite another to turn that dream into reality. If Cop thinks so much of his SSTV developments, then, why isn't he doing something with them?

But he is!

At present, Macdonald is the prime mover behind a daily series of ham radio roundtables . . . both with and without the added dimension of Slow-Scan TV. To tune in one of these exchanges is to hear — and sometimes see — Catholic nuns discuss alternative energy sources with the editor of a Minnesota magazine . . . a resident of Idaho outline his plan for combining used teletype printers with ham transmission so that printed material can be quickly and easily sent from a central library to hundreds of individuals all over the country . . . a farmer in Tennessee swap medical tips with a doctor on the West Coast . . . a technical writer in Pennsylvania describe the solar-powered amateur radio rig over which he is talking.

Yep. You can set up and operate your own private television network. Or; better yet, you can cut yourself in for some of the action that Cop Macdonald has already put into motion.

It's not that difficult to get a ham radio license and, if the thought terrifies you, you don't really need one anyway. Just find yourself a friend who already has such a certificate and let him work a rig (his or yours) for you. As long as a licensed operator is in charge, you can talk all you want on an amateur radio hookup.

Expensive? Not really. Not if you shop around for used equipment or share the cost of your setup with several others.

There's a whole new world of exciting, people-to-people, audio-visual communications being forged out there by Copthorne Macdonald and his merry crew . . . and there's no reason why you can't join the festivities. In fact, according to Cop, there's every reason why you should!

For information about obtaining a ham radio license and amateur radio equipment, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, c/o Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas. Ask for Reprint No. 201, "New Directions Radio."

Messages Help Smokers Quit

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia professor says sensory deprivation, a technique used to break the will of political prisoners, can be used to help people quit smoking.

Peter Suedfeld, a psychologist, told a seminar on respiratory disease that previously heavy smokers consumed 55 per cent fewer cigarettes two years after a single 24-hour session of sensory deprivation.

He said 80 persons volunteered for the local experiment and were divided into four groups.

Two of the groups spent 24 hours in a dark, soundproofed room where they were required to lie still on a comfortable bed and were fed only water and bland nutrients.

Prof. Suedfeld said a person's brain waves change and his ability to think clearly becomes reduced in such a situation. He said the person becomes suggestible and the idea of the study was to take advantage of that suggestibility to give the subjects a series of anti-smoking messages.

He said the messages had no effect, but the sensory deprivation did.

JELLY SIDE DOWN

She's at an Awkward Age

My daughter is at an awkward age, being 14 going on 21.

She uses my silver-green eye shadow, my pink lace nightie, and my push-me-up bra without compunction, dismissing the rest of my wardrobe as hopelessly dowdy, though all right for me.

She turns my clock radio to a rock station every afternoon, so that the following morning I am rendered apoplectic by the haunting strains of "BAHBEE, AH WANT YOU!!!" being shrieked into my right ear hole.

On the odd occasion when I use the telephone for over six minutes, she assumes a stricken look, rolls her eyes dramatically, and sighs at three-second intervals until I hang up.

She cannot see the inherent logic in the proposition that she should wash the dishes because she is almost 15 but not stay out until midnight because she is just 14.

She is petrified at the possibility of acquiring either pimples or fat. Every night she disappears underneath a preventive facial mask of Noxema and Clearasil, which gives her the general appearance of a Giant Snowy Owl. If you can imagine a snowy owl in a pink lace nightie. Determined to lose 10 pounds, she drinks seven glasses of water before each meal, which not only partially assuages her hunger, but gives her such an acute case of hiccups that eating is virtually impossible.

She washes her hair eight times every week with Johnson's shampoo, rinsing it with beer, giving her a unique aroma not unlike that of a baby who has been dropped into a keg of Schlitz.

Someday she will move away. Although I will presumably gain a tube of silver-green eye shadow, a pink lace nightie, and a push-me-up bra, I will probably still only use the telephone for six-minute stretches. I may even occasionally turn my clock radio to the rock station to hear that Golden Oldie "BAHBEE, AH WANT YOU!!!"

NDP Names Organizer

OTTAWA (CP) — Anne Dewitt of Montreal, a political organizer for the last 10 years, has been appointed women's organizer for the federal New Democratic Party.

Party secretary Clifford Scotton said Ms. Dewitt, 46, fills a position created at the last NDP national convention.

She has been active in the election campaigns of six NDP candidates in four federal and two provincial elections. She currently is an executive officer of the Quebec NDP and a member of the federal party's main council.

"I enter this job with no preconceived ideas about organizing women in a political party," Ms. Dewitt said in a news release. "The consciousness and priorities of women vary, as they do in every citizen."

Peacock Look In Ties

TORONTO (CP) — Even men who dress conservatively occasionally like a peacock look and achieve it with an eye-catching tie.

Lou Myles of Toronto, whose clientele includes movie and hockey stars, shows some strinkingly colored and patterned ties and predicts that the width of current styles is likely to become even wider.

Myles scouted fabric houses in Italy and bought bolts in patterns that would co-ordinate with his suits. Then he had the patterened silks made up by an Italian tie firm.

The new patterns were introduced in his Toronto store, one of five across the country.

Some depend on only two contrasting colors in bold, sweeping lines while others subtly blend colors in abstract arrangements. Some patterns are floral.

They are intended to burst on unsuspecting friends when the wearer doffs his jacket and vest, showing up dramatically against a pristine white shirt.

There are fun patterns for the younger man — oodles of poodles, tiny elegant ladies' and other novelties. Fun designs have been used before but not on really wide ties.

Lib Called Trauma for Male

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women's liberation is having traumatic effects on the male, says Dr. Marvin Lazerson, social historian in the faculty of Education at University of British Columbia.

Men, he said, are going through a serious and real identity crisis. And so, consequently, are women.

"I've suddenly discovered that a lot of people are having breakdowns in close relationships, marital and otherwise."

Women feel stultified and men feel women's demands on them are too great.

"The most common demand that's hitting almost everyone is the demand that men share the housework and child-raising," said Dr. Lazerson.

"Now, after perhaps 10 years of doing the dishes by herself she's saying 'Help' or 'It's your turn.' Or, more extreme, she's asking him to take time off his work to care for the children."

He said the problem of child-raising among working parents places both the man and the woman in a "terrible bind."

Whether she works or not the woman has been brought up to play the chief role with the child while the man's self-image is wrapped up in job success.

"What's his boss going to say if he takes four days off for the measles."

Sexual demands, even more then work, he continued, put the male under stress.

"If she tells you she wants more from you, you feel inadequate. If she tells you she thinks the double standard stinks, you feel threatened."

Lesbianism is the ultimate threat to the male, said Dr. Lazerson.

"Women talk more openly to each other now. They're sharing and supporting each other's emotional identity. With such intimacy it's logical to assume that sexual relationships can develop."

He said he expects the sexual revolution will lead men to be more open about their sexual needs and fears.

"It will be a big change if they become less fixated on their penis and start giving more tenderness and warmth."

He also feels the father's role will expand.

He shares housework and care of a 4½-year-old son with his wife, a practising psychotherapist.

"I have developed a proprietary attitude toward my clean floors and clean rug," said Dr. Lazerson.

"My son ate cookies and dropped his crumbs all over the rug. I immediately told him to be more careful. Damn it, he was messing up my house."

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Some children are born with their ears sticking out from the head like the handles of a jug. In such cases, if the parents see that the child is self-conscious about it — perhaps showing his self-consciousness by becoming the "class clown" or acting like a buffoon — they ought to get a plastic surgeon to do a little operation to flatten the ears against the head, where they belong. There are many very able plastic surgeons who do this type of work.

I received a release from the University of Chicago, explaining the status today of the ability of people to get much-needed growth hormone.

The University of Chicago is one of about 20 U.S. medical centres that receive human growth hormone from the National Pituitary Agency (located at the University of Maryland).

Growth hormone comes from the pituitary gland at the base of the brain. Most of the nation's supply of growth hormone is obtained from pathologists doing autopsies in hospitals. The hormone is extracted, dried, and turned into a powder which can be mixed with distilled water in order to be injected. At the present time, about a thousand children are receiving growth hormone from the research centres.

Someday, hopefully, growth hormone may be synthesized commercially; today the process is too expensive. Any child who grows only an inch a year needs growth hormone.

For example, one child at the University of Chicago centre has grown only one inch a year since he was five, and at nine, when he should be about 52 inches tall, he is only 39½ inches tall. Human growth hormone shots can help him to grow to a normal heights.

As yet, the supply of growth hormone does not meet the demand, which is very unfortunate.

Nowadays, when many persons take several medicines a day, it is a good idea, when the person gets some peculiar sympton that is not easily accounted for, such as diarrhea, frequency of urination, or a skin rash, the first thing the wise doctor may do is to have the patient stop all medicines to see if that quickly puts an end to the distressing symptom.

If it does cure, then the patient will have to take one medicine at a time until the symptom returns and he learns which drug was the offender.

For instance, a while ago a patient complained of a severe morning backache. Because it came in the morning each day and wore off during the day, I had him do some "home detective work" by stopping his usual habit of taking a certain sleeping medicine at night. Then a day or two later the backache was gone.

As I have said here before, there is also some danger in taking certain drugs in combination; sometimes they can react together in an undesired way, when singly they would not have had any bad effects.

The patient can do several things to protect himself from such effects. One is to tell his physician all the drugs he is taking, and have the doctor check in his Modern Drug Encyclopedia, to see if any of the drugs when taken together, will do him harm.

A remarkable case of drug poisoning was that of a woman who came in complaining of being sleepy, dull and inattentive. She seemed to be healthy enough, but I asked her what drugs she was taking. She confessed that because of her great nervousness she was getting tranquilizers from five different specialists, none of whom knew about the others. I had her take only one tranquilizer a day, and then she felt like a new woman.

You Can't Count on Firetrucks

WASHINGTON (WP) — "I bought a red firetruck here last year and right after that it started to fall apart, piece by piece," said a woman, sounding as sorrowful as she looked. She had returned to the store only out of necessity: it was that time of year again when toy-buying becomes imperative.

To say the least, it is not always fun doing such shopping when you can't even count on little red firetrucks. In addition, Christmas toy-buying is inevitably put off until the days have dwindled to the precious few and all the crucial decisions have to be made quickly: Will Mary or Johnny like it? Is it safe? Is it durable or will it fall apart by 6 p.m. Christmas Day?

Answers, often the wrong ones, are sometimes arrived at under conditions of extreme discomfort: while perspiring heavily from winter clothing either worn or carried about in suddenly steamy stores, and struggling for self-preservation in jam-packed aisles of hysterical people, large and small, the large ones crumbling under the pressures created by small ones wielding hockey sticks and flinging Nerf balls when there is absolutely no room to do any of that.

Sad to say, Christmas shopping can be war, especially if left to the last minute. And the mood won't be lightened any this year with money being tight and buyers striving to be more selective with their limited budgets. Stretching a dollar can snap one's nerves as quickly as some innocent-looking toy that goes BLAM-O when activated at 6 a.m.

So, now more than ever, it may pay to shop early, preserve the spirit of the season as best one can, and avoid the Christmas Eve tangle of traffic, where drivers bringing home the treasured items have been stuck bumper-to-bumper so long they were given up as lost by loved ones, or themselves feared never being heard from again at least until New Year's.

Such traditional buffetings, and even the purchase of toys that stay together a matter of minutes, have failed in the past to prompt anywhere near the kind of sensible buying that is generally expected this season. People insist they are going to purchase wisely. And toy manufacturers and salespersons say that's what they're expecting from their customers.

The reason is the tight money. The toys that are expected to sell this year are traditional ones and durable ones. Dollhouses and dollhouse furnishings. Train sets and train yard equipment. Board games. Wooden toys. Simple toys.

"Our standard, staple toys are selling the best," said Phillip Simon, manager of Lowen's Discount Toytown in Bethesda, Md. "Parents are getting a little more practical, a little more particular.

"I think people are getting tired of cheap toys. They want something with lasting value, durability. I've never seen such an early run on dollhouses. Building kits and crafts in general are picking up. When money gets tight, people want things to keep them busy at home."

Don't let your camera hibernate! Skiing, skating, snowmobiling, ice fishing and even a walk with the kids bundled up in their parkas can make exciting pictures.

The 12-page booklet "Winter Photography" offers important camera handling techniques that will help you improve your winter pictures.

Try to stay warm. Wear some thin gloves inside your mittens. They will permit you to handle your camera for short periods without freezing your fingers and hampering your dexterity. If you wear a parka that opens in the front, zip it up over your camera to keep it warm and protect it from blowing snow.

To avoid possible breakage of chilled, brittle film, advance and rewind your film slowly without jerking. Of course, the smaller your camera, the easier can you protect it against the elements.

And don't forget that some of the world's best known winter pictures were taken at night, under the moon. Most such scenes can be made more interesting if you include some lighted windows from a nearby village.

Also keep in mind that one of the pictures you take during the next few weeks, could make a wonderful Christmas card to send your friends next year!

8 CARDS OF THANKS

MRS. DOROTHY SMITH and the family of the late JOHN SMITH (M.M.) extend grateful thanks to their friends and neighbours who have been so thoughtful during their recent bereavement. Special thanks are extended to Drs. Vincent Smith, Dr. M. Kamper, Dr. Robert Love and Dr. J. R. Stratton, and to the nurses in the Coronary Unit of the Victoria General Hospital for the care and kindness shown to John during his illness. The prayers of Padre Robert Kendall and Father W. H. Bullock have sustained us through these difficult days, and we thank the members of the A.N.A.F. Unit 12 and his dear friends who served as Pallbearers. May he Rest in Peace.

The family of the late Mrs. Claribel Jones wish to thank friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral tributes in the recent loss of our dear Mother. We would also like to express our gratitude to Dr. Lamplugh and nursing staff at Victoria General Hospital for their thoughtful care of our Mother. Thanks also to Rev. Peter Isles and McCall Bros.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BICKFORD—In loving memory of Stanley, dear husband, father and grandfather, who passed away December 3, 1972.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once we were here.
And we, though absent, is just as dear.
—Sadly missed by Dot, Norma and Ken, Doreen and Bruce, Sharon and Russ and grandchildren.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

How About Winter Garden Corner?

The garden on a small city lot can be designed to have a winter garden corner. In fact so small a plot will be better enjoyed if seasonal flowers are arranged in groups within the enclosing framework of tree and shrub planting. The confusion will thus be lessened to a minimum of care.

The winter garden corner will need to catch whatever sunshine is available, which means there should be no obstruction to the sun entering at a 45 degree angle from the south at noon. Because the sun rises in the southeast near the shortest day and sets in the southwest, tree shade or other obstruction from east or west is not so critical.

But what will you grow in a winter garden? Only a first year gardener is entitled to ask that question in Victoria, for it takes only one winter here to know about the flowers which claim December and January as their own.

For delicate, airy tree branch pattern, choose the fall flowering plum Prunus subhirtella autumnalis.

Dainty pinky white blooms open during sunny mild spells, not a massive display to be sure, but encouraging and effective on bare branches.

Against a wall sheltered from northeast wind and soaking up the noon warmth, yellow winter jasmine (Jasminum nudiflorum) opens starry blossoms for the length of its yard long canes. Already the buds can be seen, and a few of the short twigs taken into the warmth of the house soon unfold glints of pale sunlight. Later the flowers open outdoors in the winter sunshine.

Now also, the earliest forms of Christmas-rose (Helleborus niger) are unfolding fat round buds at ground level. In spite of cool nights and frost at dawn, bud stems stretch up; finally buds will open.

These are strange flowers, belonging in the huge Buttercup Family (Ranunculaceae) along with Clematis, Delphinium, Paeonia and of all things the Aquilegia, or Columbine.

Some of these plants have showy flowers yet have no petals, the sepals instead being brightly colored and assuming the role of petals in the eyes of gardeners. When sepals are completely green we usually call them bracts, but in all cases they are protection for the vital seedbearing flower parts.

At the foot of a wall where sun must reach in summer for ripening the rootstock, will grow the delicately scented and perfect Iris unguicularis, the pride of many home gardeners who give it just this kind of position. Here it will bloom as early as November.

But stems will continue to appear whenever the weather is mild throughout December well into the New Year on established roots. This iris needs a rather poor soil, no fertilizer and a minimum of watering after spring growth has been made.

There are winter blooming shrubs to add size for background as well as more perfume to the winter garden. These we shall leave for another day's enjoyment.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily Monday through Saturday call:

Injury Suit Survives

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge refused Monday to dismiss a $2.5 million personal injury suit filed by Oakland Raiders defensive end Bubba Smith against the Tampa Sports Authority and the National Football League.

Smith, 29, claimed he injured his knee in a fall during a pre-season game at Tampa Stadium on Aug. 25, 1972. Smith was a member of Baltimore Colts at the time of the alleged injury.

He filed suit last August charging negligence in the handling of sideline markers by game officials and said the markers should have been removed from his path before he fell.

The suit does not specifically allege that Smith struck the marker.

Judge Ben Krentzman, calling the suit a "life history," said the language of the 12-page action was redundant and gave Smith's lawyer 30 days to prepare shorter version.

HOT FANS HURL ICE INTO RING

LONDON (Reuter) — Dinner-jacketed boxing fans hurled champagne glasses, empty bottles and ice cubes into the ring at the Hilton Hotel Monday night in protest against a referee's decision.

The crowd was angered at the points verdict awarded to Chris Finnegan, Britain's former European and Commonwealth light-heavyweight champion, after his eight-round clash with London-based Ghanaian Victor Attivor.

Referee Sid Nathan scored the fight 79-78½ in favor of Finnegan, but the Briton left the ring amid a storm of boos from spectators who believed the more agressive Ghanaian should have won.

Tiant Gets Honor

BOSTON (AP) — Luis Taint has been named Boston Red Sox' most valuable pitcher of 1974 by the Boston Baseball Writers' Association. Tiant was the first Red Sox pitcher to win 20 games for two seasons in a row since Dave Ferris in 1945-46.

Nixon Answers In Writing?

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Judge John Sirica suggested today that written questions be submitted to former president Richard Nixon if he remains too sick to testify orally in the Watergate cover-up trial.

Sirica made the suggestion following a request Monday by attorneys for defendant John Ehrlichman that the trial be recessed over the Christmas holidays to await a deposition or testimony from the ailing former president.

Nixon's testimony is crucial to his defence, Ehrlichman claims.

Sirica opened the day's court session by asking lawyers for all five defendants whether they had any objection to his asking the doctors who examined Nixon last whether the former president is well enough to answer written questions.

The court-appointed group of three doctors had reported that Nixon would not be well enough to appear even at a question-and answer session in his home in California until Jan. 6.

That would be well beyond the expected conclusion of the trial.

None of the lawyers had any objection to making an inquiry of the doctors and Sirica sent his law clerk to make contact with Dr. Charles Hufnagal, the chairman of the group.

Chief prosecutor James Neal, however, expressed reservations about allowing Nixon to answer written questions, saying "we have had a number of statements about Watergate from the former president, none of which was satisfactory."

Ottawa to Join Oil Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government intends to join an oil company in challenging tax legislation passed by the Saskatchewan legislature, Justice Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

The government will intervene when Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil Ltd. (CIGOL) of Calgary appeals the decision handed down last week by the provincial Court of Queen's Bench.

"An appeal is expected," the minister told the Commons, "and because of the constitutional aspects we will intervene."

Outside the House, Mr. Lang said Ottawa will be arguing on the side of CIGOL over the validity of the legislation.

The Court of Queens Bench turned down a challenge by CIGOL to the mineral income tax and royalty surcharge on oil legislation, rejecting company arguments that they amounted to indirect taxation and were therefore unconstitutional.

The company's lawyers said the province exceeded its authority in passing the legislation since the constitution reserved ind rect taxation for the federal government.

Normally, indirect taxes are such things as duties and excise levies charged a company by the government and added to the price before it reaches the consumer.

But the court ruled the royalty surcharges and mineral income taxes imposed by the bill are direct taxes on the companies. The levies were not meant to be passed on by the companies to customers.

On that basis, the court ruled, the taxes are within the power of the province to impose.

A BALLPARK FIGURE ON AIRPORT CARPET

OTTAWA (CP) — Enough carpeting to cover three football fields including the end zones has been used at Toronto International Airport's Terminal 2, the Commons learned Monday.

A written reply by Transport Minister Jean Marchand to Sinclair Stevens (PC — York Simcoe) showed that 5.4752 acres of carpeting have been installed at a cost of $441,490 and that a further 2.28 acres is to be installed in 1977. Marchand's reply said the carpeting cost $1.63 a square foot, without any underpadding.

Commons Seat Fight Fizzles

OTTAWA (CP) — Expected heavy Progressive Conservative opposition to proposed legislation that would expand the Commons did not materialize Monday when debate began on the redistribution bill.

Conservatives who said last week they would attempt to delay the bill, which must be passed by Dec. 31, were not in the House.

Instead, the House heard relatively mild criticism from Gordon Ritchie (PC-Dauphin) who said some members are worried by the prospect of an indefinitely expanding Commons.

The provision to enlarge the Commons after each 10-year census should contain a requirement that Parliament review the situation in the early 1980s, he said.

John Reynolds (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) said last week that Alberta and British Columbia MPs would use any possible means to delay the bill which, if not passed by the end of the year, would die.

However, he and others expected to fight the bill were not on hand and there was no sign of the filibuster Reynolds said was a possibility.

If the bill does not pass by Dec. 31, the present system will continue with only two provinces gaining seats.

The opposition of some Conservatives was based on a reluctance to see the Commons grow drastically. Also, some believed that their own provinces would not get enough seats when 15 MPs are added after the next election, expected in 1978.

Ritchie, noting that redistribution systems have been changed almost every 10 years on average since Confederation, said providing for a later review would decrease the danger of unchecked growth.

He also said the limits of categories in which provinces would be placed according to size should be changed. Including British Columbia in the large province group, likely to result from the 1981 census, would be like instituting "equality between a horse and a rabbit."

British Columbia would get a better deal by remaining in the intermediate — size group rather than being placed with Quebec and Ontario when it would have only about 30 per cent of the latter province's population.

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, said his party finds the bill "A pretty fair arrangement that may stand the test of time."

The bill is based on the belief that the present system limits representation of larger provinces relative to smaller ones. It would ensure no loss of seats for any province, but give larger ones more seats through expansion of the House.

In the next redistribution, based on the 1971 census figures, Ontario's 88 seats would rise to 95, Quebec's 74 to 75, B.C.'s 23 to 27 and Alberta's 19 to 20 while Saskatchewan and Manitoba each would gain one seat for totals of 14.

Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick would remain constant at seven, four 11 and 10 seats respectively.

With the promised addition of a second seat for the Northwest Territorits, the Yukon remaining at one, the 264-seat Commons would expand to 280 seats for the next election.

If the present system continued, only Ontario and B.C. would gain in the next redistribution with the other provinces either losing seats or remaining level.

Not a Sign Of Bribes —Allmand

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Monday that evidence he has on hand shows no indication of corruption or bribery involving the Seafarers International Union or a federal cabinet minister.

Mr. Allmand told reporters that he got from the RCMP a transcript of a telephone conversation between Labor Minister John Munro and Roman Gralewicz, president of SIU.

"There is nothing to indicate any kind of corruption or any kind of bribery," the minister told reporters outside the Commons.

The statement comes after Morton Shulman, New Democrat member of the Ontario legislature from Toronto High Park, said he will read in the legislature parts of a transcript of a police-taped conversation between Mr. Munro and an SIU agent.

He said this will buttress his charges. He has said the SIU made campaign donations to the Liberal party, paid bribes to federal Liberals and federal public servants and that the union is rife with terror.

There is no indication of whether the transcript of the telephone conversation acqired by the RCMP from either that the Toronto city police or the Ontario Provincial Police — Mr. Allmand was not sure which — and the transcript mentioned by Mr. Shulman are the same.

But he said there is no "hokey pokey" indicated on the transcript he has.

The minister said the way the Toronto Star mentioned a tape in a Saturday story was "McCathyism at its worst" because it gave no indication of the contents of the tape. This is a reference to the anti-Communist witch-hunts of U.S. Senator Joseph McCarthy 20 years ago.

The Star said it had learned that tapes of a legally authorized Metropolitan Toronto police intelligence unit wiretap revealed a conversation between the union and Mr. Munro about campaign contributions.

Sewers to Push Housing Costs

Sanitary and storm sewer connections will cost housebuilders more if council goes along with a finance committee recommendation.

"I realize it's again pushing up the cost of housing," Ald. Ken Hill said Monday night.

Rates that formerly ran from $240 to $425 will now range from $400 to $600, to become effective if passed by council Dec. 9.

Prodigal Argonauts Want to Come Home

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, who early this year saw some of their players move to the new World Football League, now faces a return rush from the financially-troubled WFL.

"We've had many calls from WFL players interested in having a tryout with us next season," says Argo owner Bill Hodgson.

Argo general-manager John Barrow said: "I have received about a half-dozen calls from kids in the WFL who were not being paid. Some of them have never received a pay cheque.

"Some of the calls have been from players who did not like our contracts in the first place. They said they would go to the WFL and we did not discourage them. Now, some of them want to come back. We again will not discourage them."

Among those trying to come back is defensive end Bruce Bergey who left Argos to go to Portland Storm, a club that still owes i's players most of their salaries.

"The whole thing has been and still is a nightmare," said Bergey who has had to dip into his savings to pay daily expenses.

"Our contract was supposed to be guaranteed by the league (WFL) but the league has no money."

Bergey said he knew he was taking a gamble when he went to Portland and now that it has failed he advises any CFL player who is thinking of going to the WFL to "forget it."

"If things continue in the WFL the way they are, I can guarantee that telephone lines to the CFL will be very busy the next few months."

Gov't Eyes Links

The provincial government is considering purchase of a 25-acre parcel of land currently in operation as a golf club on Galiano Island, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Monday.

Williams said purchase of the property would be carried out under the province's greenbelt fund and a favorable decision on the purchase will depend on price negotiations and leasing terms.

The property, owned by Robert Aston, is currently leased by the Galiano Golf and Country Club as a nine-hole golf course and the club wishes to continue in operation after the purchase.

In the event of government purchase of the land the course would be operated as a public course open to residents and visitors alike, Williams said.

Forest Workers Back on Job

HAZELTON, B.C. (CP) — Rim Forest Products Ltd. reopened Monday with a work force of 50 men and owner Bill Sterling said more men would be hired later.

RIM went into receivership last July, throwing 175 employees out of work.

Sterling said the firm was able to re-open because of refinancing through the Royal Bank and the provincial government's reduction in stumpage rates last week.

In Terrace, members of International Woodworkers of America local 1-71 returned to work Monday following settlement of a labor dispute with Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd.

Ben Thompson, president of the local, said the parties agreed Friday that a dozen IWA fallers who were recently laid off would be rehired.

Production at Prince George and Intercontinental Pulp Mills resumed Monday folllowing settlement of a dispute between the companies and members of the pulp, paper and woodworkers of Canada.

Union members walked off the job Friday to protest the suspension of two employees who refused to operate their computers because of their dissatisfaction with wage rates.

3 Loans To Aid Mall, Parks

The city of Victoria will receive $1,535,600 in federal loans to help construct the Government Street mall, a new public works service building on Garbally and change rooms and toilets in three city parks.

A loan of $850,000 will be used to complete the mall between Humboldt and Johnson, creating 11,825 man-days of employment at a payroll cost of $473,000. The loan of $600,000 for the Garbally site building will create 4,422 man-days of employment with a payroll cost of $185,724.

The third loan, for $85,650, is for facilities at Pemberton, Victoria West and Oaklands Parks.

The loans will be from the winter Capital Projects Fund, the federal government paying 100 per cent of all direct on-site labor costs during the winter months and 50 per cent of them during the summer months.

NEW PACT FOR GRIESE

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins have signed quarterback Bob Griese to a renegotiated multiyear contract. The details of the pact were not announced.

Griese, whose old contract would have expired at the end of the 1975 National Football League season, led the Dolphins into the NFL playoffs four straight years and to two successive Super Bowl titles.

WOMEN'S SKI SERIES PACKS $90,000 PURSE

NEW YORK (AP)—Plans were announced Monday for a series of women's freestyle skiing competitions with a total purse of $90,000.

First of six events will be staged Dec. 19-21 at Aspen, Colo. Other tournaments are scheduled for Stowe, Vt., Jan. 23-25; Waterville Valley, N.H., and Sugarloaf, Me., dates to be announced later; Edmonton, March 21-23, and Heavenly Valley, Calif., April 4-6.

Each of the six events will have $12,500 in prize money with $15,000 going to the Grand Prix champions at the end of the series.

LIP Finagles Denied by 2

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Robert Andras and Finance Minister John Turner washed their hands of blame Monday in the Commons as Opposition MPs pressed for an inquiry into allegations of political intervention in the Local Initiatives Program.

The allegations received some credence last week when Tom Cossitt (PC — Leeds) tabled a memo to Andras from a former manpower deupty minister which said "No project is approved without concurrence of a regional minister."

But Andras, under questioning from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Cossitt, maintained that no minister had been given authority to veto or approve projects except himself.

In a surprising move, Turner rose and said that he had never intervened personally in a LIP grant.

No one had mentioned Turner in questioning.

As the attention of opposition MPs turned to Turner, Stanfield noted that no one had made accusations against the finance minister.

"Since it is the hour of the true confession, perhaps the other ministers should get up," Stanfield added.

Turner said Leeds was a riding for which he had "some responsibility" and noted that it received more in LIP money than his own Ottawa-Carleton.

Last week, Cossitt tabled letters and memos in the Commons which he said showed Andras had misled MPs in denying there were political considerations in the LIP program.

Among them was a letter from former environment minister Jack Davis identifying himself as the "regional minister" who approved programs for British Columbia. Davis asked that his office clear all B.C. projects.

Stanfield raised the question again Monday by asking treasury board president Jean Chretien if there will be an inquiry into the program.

Truck Tax Break Retroactive?

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Monday he will ask cabinet to make retroactive to before the Nov. 18 budget the elimination of federal sales taxes on new trucks and other transportation equipment.

The plan would involve refunds to dealers in trucks, buses and a variety of types of heavy equipment who had units on their lots at the time the tax change was made.

Turner said he anticipates cabinet will pass the proposal.

Bicycle dealers — who are in the same situation as truck dealers — would not get the same tax relief to pass on to customers. There is to be no change from tax rules in the budget affecting car buyers.

The budget removed a 12-per cent sales tax which is assessed when the sale is made to dealers by manufacturers. The tax was taken off sales of trucks or truck-trailer combinations of more than eight tons, buses carrying 12 or more and a variety of other types of transportation equipment.

Dealers had paid the tax on equipment still on their lots on budget day and the tax on large equipment, such as construction equipment, often amounts to several thousand dollars a unit. There would be no tax on purchases after budget day.

Turner said dealers had reported that many customers preferred to delay purchases to buy tax-free equipment or to transfer orders to dealers who already have tax-free equipment.

A 12-per-cent tax on bicycles also was removed in the Nov. 18 budget. But the retroactive tax relief proposal does not apply to bicycles. A finance department spokesman said bicycles are not considered transportation equipment for tax purposes.

A Break for Little Man In Defending Himself

Changes in law proposed by the B.C. Law Reform Commission would make it more worthwhile for a person to represent himself in a civil action in the province's courts.

The five-member commission has tentatively recommended that a person who represents himself in a civil case, and wins, be awarded the same costs as if a lawyer had handled the case.

As the law now stands, a person who represents himself and wins the case, is only entitled to "out-of-pocket" expenses such as money paid out for transcripts, witness fees or court registries.

A lawyer who represents a person in a civil case, and wins, is entitled not only to the out-of pocket expenses, but also to fees for such services as interviewing witnesses, preparing documents and preparations for the trial.

A schedule of costs for such services is set out in an appendix to the Rules of Court. For example, the set fee for the preparation of a written argument, requested by the court, is a minimum of $25 and a maximum of $100.

The commission's recommendations were made "in the light of growing concern over the issue of citizen access to the courts, and with the increasing frequency of appearances by litigants in person in our courts — witnessed by the growth of "do it yourself" divorce services — and the rising costs of legal services."

The rule that only "out-of-pocket" expenses can be recovered by a person who represents himself, is "unjust and indefensible," the commission's report states.

The report, entitled "Costs of Successful Litigants in Person," is being circulated for comments and criticisms of interested groups or the general public.

The criticisms and comments will be taken into account before a final recommendation is made to the attorney-general.

Any comments should be directed to the Law Reform Commission, 10th Floor, 1055 West Hastings, Vancouver.

Zoning Law Bent To Boost Taxes

In a bid to broaden the tax base, Saanich council will bend some of its rules for the Whittier Avenue area.

Prodded by Ald. Fred Severson Monday night, the council agreed a public hearing be held on an application from J. C. Switzer and Company Ltd. to have 3321-3323 and 3327 Whittier rezoned from single family to industrial.

The company wants to build a warehouse and office for its wholesale grocery distributing business.

Switzer's request was tabled Nov. 18 because the company was unable to get access from Tennyson.

(To preserve the residential area on Whittier, the municipality has ruled that industrial companies on that side of the street provide green belt areas and route their traffic away from Whittier on to Tennyson).

A letter from the company's solicitor Monday urged quick action because Switzer's time on acquiring the property is running out.

It said that Switzer was willing to pay 25 per cent of the cost of putting a cul-de-sac in off Tennyson and would close access from Whittier once a cul-de sac was established.

Severson, noting Saanich intended to allow industrial development to extend to the border of Whittier with three cul-de-sacs planned for Tennyson to divert the heavy traffic, accused Saanich of "falling behind."

He asked, "Are we going to stop business moving out until we're ready?"

Ald. Bill Campbell agreed Switzer should be allowed to go ahead, providing it met its commitments and Ald. Joseph Bourque conceded the firm's offer was "a reasonable compromise."

Mayor Ed Lum said he was in favor because it would broaden the tax base.

Ald. Les Passmore, Ald. Mel Couvelier and municipal planner Tom Loney were against allowing Switzer to go ahead at this time.

"I know it may cause temporary hardship in some cases," Couvelier said, "But unless we do force decisions in this manner decisions will not be made."

"There was a commitment, in my opinion, to the ratepayers. We gave assurance to the ratepayers that Whittier would not be cluttered with trucks," Passmore reminded council.

SEVERSON
. . . prodding

Loney said Switzer should be made to establish the green belt along its section of Whitter, as required, and wanted more time to study the cul-de-sac plans.

When it came to the vote Couvelier voted against the public hearing. Passmore abstained because he is leaving council in December. However, as he did not leave the council chamber, his abstention counted as a vote against the proposal.

Seniors Housing Approved

Oak Bay council Monday night gave the go-ahead to a major housing project for senior citizens but only after worrying aloud about the aesthetics of the seven-building complex.

Aldermen voted to proceed with a land-use contract for the 234-unit project, to be built by the B.C. Baptist Foundation on a site of almost three acres on Bee Street.

A motion to refer the design to an advisory committee was defeated after Ald. Douglas McLelland argued plans were essentially the same as those approved in principle by council earlier.

The housing is being largely funded with a $4 million loan from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. It is expected to be completed early in 1976.

Council was assured by architect William Wilding that exterior walls will be of brick, with plastic or metal-coated roofing, and it will not look "tackey."

In other business, council decided to gather public reaction to a proposal for a two-storey, eight-unit condominium on property at 1447 St. David St. Plans are on view at the municipal hall and neighbors will be asked their opinions.

Houseboat Disputes To Federal Gov't

West Bay Marina houseboat residents and Esquimalt residents who object to houseboats should take their complaints to the federal government, an Esquimalt council committee ruled Monday.

Aldermen said they can't deal with problems at the Head Street marina because the boats are outside municipal boundaries.

Foreshore property, below the high tide mark, belongs to the federal department of transport and is governed by its regulations it was pointed out.

As one Esquimalt resident told aldermen: "Your hands are tied till you get co-operation from the federal government."

But houseboat dweller Carl Smith asked aldermen, "Why can't council be the advance guard in the matter and propose a new law to the federal government?"

About 25 houseboaters attended the meeting along with four land-based residents who want the floating homes removed.

One of the four objected to the boats because they are "all different shapes and sizes," and another said they blocked her view.

Marina residents had come to the meeting thinking aldermen wanted the floating homes forcibly removed.

But Ald. Conrad Lundgren said, "I have nothing against floating homes. When I went down there I got a feeling of freedom and independence which the water brings.

"But this is the only marina in Esquimalt, and we need space for pleasure boats."

Ald. Terry Prentice agreed and said, "When we drew up plans for the marina, it was supposed to be for pleasure boats.

"There was no intention that boats such as are in there now should be there."

Prentice said he had no objection to the homes as long as council had a long-term method, in writing, of controlling their standard and taxation.

The two areas of concern, he said, is that houseboats can deteriorate and their owners do not pay municipal taxes although they use civic facilities.

CIA Cited in Jail-Break Aid

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency CIA staged a daring jail break in Rhodesia to free one of its agents, according to columnist Jack Anderson. Rhodesian authorities, according to Anderson, arrested an Englishman and a Scot who supplied the CIA with information about violators of the Rhodesia trade embargo. One man was an editor for the Rhodesia Herald in Salisbury and the other was a lawyer in private practice.

Anderson said the men gave details of their spying to authorities after they were beaten and tortured. The journalist was sentenced in 1969 to 18 months hard labor and the lawyer got four years.

The United States negotiated the release of one man, who was delivered to the airport while allegedly en route to prison, Anderson said, but "stubbornly refused to give up the other."

"The CIA, say our sources, freed him by staging a daring jail break, then whisked him off to a new life in another land."

McCarthy Mulling

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Former Senator Eugene McCarthy, a Democratic presidential candidate in 1968, said Monday he may run for president as an independent in 1976. Asked about financing a campaign, the former Minnesota senator said: "We don't contemplate running in primaries, which can be expensive.

'Time Wasted' At Conventions

Saanich aldermen want to spend more time discussing mutual problems with their counterparts in other "bedroom municipalities" when they attend Union of B.C. Municipalities conventions.

Ald. Mel Couvelier won support from most aldermen Monday night when he said too much time at the conventions is wasted debating redundant resolutions.

Couvelier said more time should be spent with leaders from such municipalities as Richmond, Surrey, Coquitlam and Delta.

"We should caucus separately," Ald. Fred Severson said.

Mayor Ed Lum said many delegates attending the UBCM meeting represented much smaller municipalities.

"We should be able to have more time with people from bedroom municipalities who have similar problems to our own," he said.

Ald. Sandy Noel said today resolutions, that often appear to be similar, are submitted for specific reasons, to meet individual problems of municipalities.

"These are experienced and dedicated people,' Noel said of the resolutions committee, "I wouldn't want to knock them."

OAK BAY REJECTS TWO DUPLEXES

Saanich council Monday rejected two requests for permission to build duplexes because of possible deterioration of residential areas.

Both would have broken the municipality's ruling that no more than one duplex be allowed within a 600 feet radius.

The first was for a duplex at 3520 Maplewood, which already has five duplexes within the 600 feet radius.

The other was for a duplex at 49 Lurline, which has nine duplexes within the radius.

The council also granted approval to Rev. Leo Robert for a strata title subdivision of a duplex at 4074-4076 Cedar Hill.

ARCHITECTS APPOINTED

Lester and Peterson were appointed architects for Saanich's branch library, to be built at the corner of Cedar Hill and McKenzie, at Monday's council meeting.

The library will be the second to be built in Saanich and is planned to service the rapidly growing Gordon Head area.

The council also appointed newspaperman Edward Ward-Harris as a Saanich representative on the board of the Greater Victoria Public Library.

Ward-Harris replaces Brian Tobin, who has resigned.

80 Building Permits Granted

Eighty building permits, for construction worth $2,324,280, were taken out in Saanich in November.

Reflecting the increased costs of labor and materials, for the same period in 1973, 113 permits then represented an outlay of $1,276,505.

Two permits, for construction costing more than $50,000, were taken out this November. One was for a $1,116 service station addition at 3377 Douglas and the other, a $54,600 home at 4478 Emily Carr.

Thirty permits were taken out for single-family homes at a total value of $980,600, compared to 42 for a value of $1,087,250 in November of 1973.

Construction figures show an increase in single-family homes for the first 11 months of this year, compared to 1973.

This year, 1,196 permits have been taken out for a total value of $24,651,130, compared to 1973 when 1,137 permits were issued for a total value of $29,913,990.

Dutch Party

Those Victorians lucky enough to be invited to Dutch Sinterklaas' party after his arrival in town Saturday should gather at Holland House, 733 Vanalman Ave. about 3 p.m.

The party, staged by members of Victoria's Dutch community, is for children.

Sinterklaas will arrive to give gifts in a non-traditional way, by car, rather than on the white horse of legend.

Alert Sounded on Misleading Ads

Consumers should register complaints against some B.C. retailers who consistently use misleading advertising, Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young said Monday.

"We are seeing far too much advertising at the retail level which stresses price savings in very questionable ways.

"Some stores seem to have continuous 'sales'", said Young, "and with so many sales, one wonders if these stores have any regular prices."

She said her department quite often finds that the "so-called" sale price is really the normal price or very close to it.

Consumers who see or hear misleading advertising should complain directly to the retailer, or even to the newspapers, TV or radio stations carrying the ad.

The department, she said, is acting on complaints and will ask retailers to prove their claims.

With the Christmas buying season in progress, said Young, the department will keep a close watch and enforce legislation concerning misleading price advertising.

HONG KONG (AFP) — Taiwan has been urged to admit selected numbers of "freedom swimmers" to save them from being sent back to China.

Simon Li, a member of Taiwan's national assembly, said today that he has proposed a debate on the subject in the assembly this month.

Li added that this was still not enough. Other countries should be approached to share the responsibility of granting asylum to the refugees.

He suggested that the Hong Kong government give the illegal immigrants a week to 10 days of grace to enable them to find some other country for shelter.

11,000 Jobless, 315 City Jobs

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

There are about 11,000 Victorians looking for work and only 315 jobs listed at the local Canada Manpower office, manager Stan Purdy said today.

This means about 33 people are available to fill every job listed, despite the extra Christmas hiring.

Purdy said the surplus of workers spreads across the board but is especially noted in the service occupations such as waitresses and chambermaids.

"There is no prospects of an immediate improvement and after Christmas it could be pretty grim," he said.

However, the unemployment rate for the Victoria area is holding slightly under the British Columbia average at about 6 per cent.

Purdy said the Victoria economy continues to fare better than elsewhere on the Island where forest industry layoffs have taken a heavy toll.

For example, the unemployment level for the Sooke-Jordan River area is estimated to be about 12 per cent because of a layoff of loggers and a cutback in supporting occupations such as trucking.

In Victoria, the total number of forest industry layoffs is 650, with 450 out of work at B.C. Forest Products plywood plant and mill and another 200 out at Victoria Plywood.

Because Victoria is a commercial centre for all of the south Vancouver Island region, the layoffs are causing concern for local merchants.

Purdy said some major department stores and appliance dealers are being more selective in their credit policies.

(Department store officials said credit decisions were being made on an individual basis and persons laid off often are still eligible for credit. A cutback in credit was normal when unemployment was on the increase.)

Pre-Christmas sales were reported to be very brisk despite the economic downturn in British Columbia. Victoria merchants reported that some toy items had already been sold out.

Purdy said merchants continued to be optimistic at this time, although there was some concern about conditions in January, after the annual Yuletide buying spree.

He stressed that Victoria coneinues to have a solid economic base because of the large number of people employed in the civil service where layoffs were unlikely.

"Victoria will continue to do better than the provincial average and much better than the Island as a whole, which relies heavily upon the forest industry."

While there was a surplus of workers in most occupations, there are jobs available for engineers, automobile salesmen and draftpersons.

Jobs are also posted for sales clerks, day workers and baby sitters.

Purdy was commenting on the monthly economic report compiled by John Atcheson of the local Canada Manpower office.

The report shows 140 jobs listed at the main office, another 45 at the industrial employment office and 130 federal and provincial government jobs; for a total of 315.

This is down from an all-time high of just over 1,000 in September.

The report shows local foundries, machine shops and metal fabricating plants remain fairly busy at this time but there is concern about possible cutbacks after Christmas as a delayed reaction to layoffs in the forest industry.

Construction is slowing down in the Victoria area and the demand for workers is very light. A construction slowdown is normal at this time of year.

Real estate sales were off in October and appear to have been down rather sharply in November, according to a preliminary estimate, the Canada Manpower report says.

Rental accommodation continues in very short supply and lower and moderately-priced apartment units are almost non-existent.

Mortgage companies continue to be very selective in granting loans.

The current interest rate for first mortgages in the core area is 12 per cent and second mortgages range from 15 to 18 per cent, depending upon the buyer's equity in the house and his credit rating.

Outside the core area on unsewered property, first mortgages range from 13 to 15 per cent and second mortgages are listed as high as 21 per cent, depending upon the buyer's credit rating.

Harvesting of vegetable crops is just being completed. The annual holly crop harvest is under way with between 40 and 50 people employed.

Most of the workers are housewives who come back year after year for this type of seasonal employment.

The fish packing plant has cut back its operations as usual for the winter season with only a minimum staff to process drag fish and to assist in moving to a new processing plant.

Oakland Industries will be moving to its new facilities at 630 Montreal from its present plant at 1306 Wharf.

ARSON BLAMED

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — Fires in three city ayartment blocks broke simultaneously about 3 a.m. today with no reports of injuries so far, RCMP in this community, about 200 miles southeast of Saskatoon, said.

Two of the apartment blocks have collapsed. Police said officials suspect arson in one of the fires.

Israel, Egypt Toss N-Bomb Threats

Times News Services

Egypt today claimed that it has the potential and the right to build nuclear weapons. The statement, by Egyptian ambassador to England Sa'ad Elshazly, also included a comment that he felt another Mideast war is inevitable.

It came in the wake of Israeli claims Monday that Israel has "the potential to build nuclear weapons and will do so if needed."

Answering questions of an international science reporters' group in Tel Aviv President Ephraim Katzier repeatedly refused to say just how far Israeli scientists have gone along the road to nuclear capabilities. He said Israel does not have such weapons today but could produce them "within a reasonable period of time."

"If necessary, Israel will protect herself by all means possible," he emphasized.

"I think there will be another war because you see there is a minimum which we can accept," Elshazly told a television interviewer.

"And, if they don't concede to this minimum then war is inevitable."

Shazly, who commanded Egyptian forces in the October 1973 Middle East war, said Egypt had nuclear capabilities but had never thought of converting them to armed capabilities until the Israel announcement.

Israel today accused Egypt of digging "earth channels" on the east bank of the Suez canal and said they were the kind used for launching missiles.

A military spokesman said Israel filed a complaint with the United Nations Emergency Force and that UN observers have sent a team to check the area.

There was no immediate comment from Egyptian or UN officials.

Foreign observers have believed since the mid-1960s that the Israelis were able to produce atomic bombs and warheads if the government decided they were necessary.

But Katzir was the first high-ranking Israeli official to confirm this.

Tel Aviv has said repeatedly that it would not be the first government to introduce nuclear weapons into the Middle East, and Katzir repeated this pledge.

$3,000 RING AND WATER PLEASE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are holding a man who they believe swallowed a $3,000 ring in a theft at a jewelry store Monday.

A police spokesman said the 26-year-old man asked to see the ring and a clerk put it on the counter. The clerk turned away and when she looked back the ring was gone.

The man said the ring might have fallen to the floor and he and another clerk searched around the counter. During the hunt the man complained of a dry throat and asked for a drink of water.

Police were called and the customer submitted to a search in a back room. But he refused to be X-rayed.

$600,000 Grant For Law Library

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The B.C. Law Foundation has granted $600,000 to the University of Victoria's fledgling law faculty for the purchase of law library books.

The grant will be made in equal installments of $150,000 a year for the next four years and will "ease the burden considerably" of setting up the library, UVic Dean of Law Murray Fraser said today.

"It's a magnificent gift that gives us a guaranteed income that enables us to plan our acquisition policy," Fraser said.

Cost estimates for a "modest law library" for teaching and limited research are about $1.5 million, Fraser said. The provincial government has made contributions towards that amount and other contributions and budgetary funds will make up the total.

The dean said he hopes the estimated 67 to 70 first class students for the faculty of law who arrive in December, 1975 will have a library with about 20,000 volumes.

"Those are really the basics and are barely enough."

He said the minimum libary volume figure established for law schools is 65,000 and that a law school such as Queen's in Kingston, Ont., which has been in existence for 15 years, has a library of 99,000 volumes.

Fraser said he thought the grant from the Law Foundation was a "vote of confidence" in the faculty and the university.

The B.C. Law Foundation was set up five years ago and makes grants in the fields of legal aid, education, research and law reform.

The foundation's funds are derived from the interest from trust funds which are administered by lawyers in the province.

U.K. Slashes Defence

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced today plans for an $11.2-billion cut in defence spending during the next 10 years, intended particularly to reduce commitments east of Suez.

But Defence Secretary Roy Mason, announcing the results of a nine-month review of defence policy in the House of Commons, called the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "the linchpin of British security" and said NATO "will remain the first charge on the resources available for defence."

U.S. Plans Gold Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will sell two million ounces of gold, valued officially at $84.4 million, from its government-held gold reserves, Treasury Secretary William Simon said today.

Simon also said the government will not ask for a postponement of the right for Americans to buy gold after Dec. 31.

He said the government gold will be sold at a public auction on Jan. 6.

The price of gold slumped more than $6 an ounce on European bullion markets today following the U.S. announcement.

NEWS BRIEFS

Picket Violence

WINNIPEG (CP — Police were called on today to intervene in the second outbreak of violence in less than a week at the strike-bound Flyer Industries Ltd. plant. About 15 uniformed police, some armed with riot sticks, were summoned to hold back a crowd of striking workers and supporters who attempted to halt traffic into the plant.

The brief flare-up occurred shortly after police ushered management personnel's cars through the picket line.

Auto Firms Backed

PARIS (UPI) — France backed up a sweeping overhaul of the country's ailing automobile industry today with a $290 million government loan.

Ambulance Moves

SETON PORTAGE (CP) — Agreement has been made to use an emergency rail ambulance that was halted by the B.C. railway strike. Residents in remote communities have been without rail ambulances since Nov. 21 when 550 members of five shopcraft unions went on strike, halting all rail service.

Oil Fine $1,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro and Imperial Oil Ltd. were each fined $1,000 Monday following their conviction on a charge of dumping oil into waters frequented by fish. The incident occurred Nov. 5 when between 1,000 and 1,200 gallons of fuel oil overflowed from a tank at a downtown bus depot and flowed into Burrard Inlet through storm sewers.

Hijacker Silent

SASKATOON (CP) — Naim Djemal, charged in connection with the hijacking of a CP Air jetliner last week, was remanded without election or pleas to Wednesday when he appeared in magistrate's court today. Djemal, a 30-year-old native of Cyprus and resident of Winnipeg, said today he had decided to get the advice of a lawyer.

STRIKE SPARKS BREADLINES

Times News Services

LONDON — Bread disappeared from shelves across Britain today on the first day of a bakers' union strike that reduced supplies by 80 per cent.

"Housewives have gone crazy," said the secretary of the National Consumer Protection Council today. "They are going from shop to shop buying up all the bread they can lay their hands on."

By midmorning, most shops in London had run out of bread as 33,000 bakery workers in England and Wales struck for higher pay. The strike closed bakeries that supply three-quarters of the bread in the two regions.

Leaders of the member Bakers' Union, demanding a 66 per cent pay raise and four weeks' annual vacation, vowed to stay out indefinitely.

"There will be some bread here and there today, but tomorrow our action will really bite," Bakers Union general secretary Stan Gretton said. "We are prepared to stay out indefinitely. It is up to the employers now."

Union leaders and employers were meeting with officials of the concilation and arbitration service in a bid to resolve the strike.

Small independent bakers were not affected. One of them in East London, Ian Kilbey, said he baked three times his normal production Monday, opened his shop at 7 a.m. and had lines of customers until closing time.

Bread Shortages Feared for East

OTTAWA (CP) — Bread, pasta and flour shortages are a strong possibility in Eastern Canada this winter if wheat does not start moving soon from Thunder Bay.

"We have only 50 per cent of our winter requirements in eastern positions," said J. F. Blakney, chairman of the Canadian National Millers Association.

"The other 50 per cent is at Thunder Bay or back of there."

The association represents 16 companies who process 99 per cent of the country's flour needs.

Blakney said the shortage would be due to the strike by Great Lakes ships' officers in August and September and the walkout by 222 grain inspectors Nov. 23.

The grain inspectors walkout came when the federal government failed to negotiate a contract settlement with the primary product inspectors, who check food for quality and purity.

Blakney said Monday the railways would not be able to move the grain eastward because of the volume, the shortage of rail cars and the winter in Northern Ontario.

Even if grain movements are resumed in the next few days, there will be shortages this winter, Blakeney predicted.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand, asked in the Commons if there is a contingency plan to move grain, said only that it would not be in the public interest to reveal plans at this stage.

Meanwhile in Winnipeg, the president of United Grain Growers (UGG) today said the federal government should immediately order striking grain inspectors at Thunder Bay to return to work until the close of navigation.

A. M. Runciman said the UGG was not asking that all 220 grain inspectors on strike across Canada be ordered back to work—only the 100 at Thunder Bay.

He said ships will have to leave thunder Bay before Dec. 10 if they are to get through the seaway locks at Lake Ontario that are set to close Dec. 14.

In Moose Jaw, Public Service alliance (PSA) pickets turned back a Canadian Pacific Railway train at 11 p.m. Monday at the Canadian government elevators.

Wally Glockler, Saskatchewan representative of the PSA, said the union had heard rumors of 25 empty grain cars due for arrival at the elevators.

Timing 'Critical' in Trudeau Meeting With Ford

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The visit of Prime Minister Trudeau over the next two days comes at a critical time in Canada-U.S. relations.

Two highly-publicized recent issues have served to focus U.S. interest on the talks Trudeau will have with President Ford on Wednesday and promise to make his press conference the following day a lively one.

These are oil and beef.

But it is expected that the main topic will be much broader — what's known as "the big picture," especially the economic picture as it affects two neighbors who are each other's biggest customers.

For some time there has been concern here about what is often called "growing nationalism" in Canada.

There are those who react strongly and bitterly to recent Canadian policies, a number of people in Congress, for instance.

But official policy, as much as it touches on Canada, in the state department and White House, has tended to react much more gently.

To a certain extent the same thing has been happening in Canada.

Ford, however, is getting a loud message from his old buddies in Congress. Essentially it is to take a tougher line and press Trudeau for some concessions on oil supply.

Trudeau will get a chance to discuss this issue privately on Thursday, when he is invited to breakfast with 10 members of the U.S. senate.

While the state department has been cautious not to antagonize Canada since the announcement that oil exports would be phased out by the early 1980s, it must be remembered that Ford is highly susceptible to the opinions of his congressional friends.

However, against this is the possibility that Ford will act impulsively and without particular attention to the advice he receives in the pre-meeting briefings which he is now getting.

There are, of course, many other bilateral issues which are outstanding, such as foreign investment screening, the auto pact, Canadian tax policy toward U.S. magazines, a half-dozen environmental questions ranging from East Coast tankers to the Great Lakes clean-up even worries about Canadian restrictions on U.S. football teams.

The over-riding concern in both countries at present is unquestionably the economy in general. Ford and U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger will be interested in getting an insight on how Canada intends to cope with the slide from inflation into recession.

Given the immense influence of U.S. economic policy on Canada, Trudeau will want to find out what Ford intends to do — an enigma still to the American people and perhaps even to Ford himself.

Premature Opening for Parcels

Victoria Times
TUESDAY, DEC. 3, 1974 17
SECOND SECTION

Those beautifully-wrapped Christmas presents could come apart at the airport if travellers try to carry them aboard as hand baggage, Air Canada district manager S. G. Mooney said today.

"All hand baggage is subject to being opened by security guards — even Christmas presents," he said.

Mooney said presents are not opened, however, if they are placed inside luggage that is checked aboard.

He said the purpose of the security search is to assure that a potential hijacker does not carry a weapon on his person. Material inside suitcases that cannot be reached by passengers during flight is of less concern.

"This does not mean that all Christmas presents carried aboard will be opened—but it could happen and it would be an unfortunate situation."

If presents must be carried aboard they should be lightly wrapped with a lid that can be easily removed so the contents can be inspected, he said.

Mooney stressed that the security guards are instructed to inspect any suspicious-looking item, and Christmas presents with metalic wrapping paper give off a warning signal on the electronic scanning devices.

The regulation applies to all flights, even for the short hop to Vancouver.

Meanwhile, space on airlines over the Christmas holiday is just about completely booked although a few seats are still available, Mooney said.

Sunshine flights are just about 100 per cent sold out but there is some space on flights to Canadian points, although possibly not on the exact date a traveller might wish.

The Christmas flight season stretches from Christmas Eve through New Years Day.

Air Canada has scheduled 25 extra flights out of Vancouver to the Prairies and eastern Canada during that period but this additional space is almost all booked.

Mooney said the vast majority of travellers are coming to realize they have to book before the end of November to be assured to space.

TRUEIT
. . . time to be wary

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It is one of the quirks of the Canadian Criminal Code that conviction for breaking and entering a person's home may be punishable by up to life in prison while conviction of breaking into other places such as a store or a bank carries a maximum penalty of 14 years.

The penalties are "all out of proportion," a judge in Victoria concedes, but hastily adds they demonstrate how seriously the ever-familiar house "b and e" should be considered.

That no one, to his knowledge, has ever received the maximum sentence is beside-the-point.

The law, he suggests, merely reflects and supports an age-old principle that a man's home is his castle — inviolable to intrustion.

The sad truth is that principle is being flouted daily . . . and never so much as during the month of December.

Police departments are swamped with reports. If last year's statistics ring true, this year between three to four Greater Victoria homes will be broken into each day during the coming month.

It is a time to be especially wary, Det. Insp. Charles Trueit of the Saanich police force cautions.

He warns if you are going out at night leave some lights on, perhaps a radio left running, and . . . be sure to lock up behind you.

During daylight hours — and as many if not more break-ins occur then as during darkness — you can help your neighbours be reporting to police if you see any suspicious people approaching homes or loitering on the street.

"People shouldn t feel embarrassed contacting us . . . we'll respond to any call, even if it is placed anonymously," he says.

Who's committing the break-ins is anyone's guess, though juveniles figure in many, perhaps in some areas, the majority.

Three juvenile boys are now before the court charged with 30 recent break-ins in Saanich.

Two weeks ago, four juvenile boys were charged with 11 break-ins in Esquimalt.

Chief John Green of Oak Bay estimates juveniles are responsible for two out of every three reports of crime in his municipality.

Trueit says parents "have to be a little suspicious" if their child brings home goods which he claims he "found" or received in a "trade" with a friend.

"The majority of parents haven't a clue what their kids are up to when they are away from home.

"And when they find out their son or daughter has been picked up by police they are shocked, completely taken aback . . . and most really cooperate with us in trying to straighten out the child.'

'Parents Haven't a Clue'

He attributes juvenile crime to idleness.

''Kids have inquisitive minds. They watch a police story on TV and wonder 'what would happen if I did it?' They're looking for a new experience, for adventure, and the act gives them status with their peers."

However, Trueit says, it would be unfair to blame juveniles for all house break-ins.

Drug addicts and hardened criminals account for many, he says, but how many and in what proportion, there is no way to tell.

Police generally feel the courts are not providing sufficient deterrence in sentencing.

There is little the juvenile court can do other than set a probation term, perhaps a small restitution order and encourage the child to mend his ways.

But, Trueit wonders, is that enough?

He cites the recent rash of house break-ins in Saanich and says one of the juveniles picked up was already on remand for sentencing with respect to an earlier, separate charge of breaking and entering.

This kind of recidivism is common, he suggests.

In adult court, conviction of breaking and entering a dwelling house seldom results in a jail sentence for the first offender and usually only a two to three-year term for the repeater.

"We are guided by decisions handed down by the Court of Appeals," a provincial court judge says. "And we try to be consistent with what they set."

In recent unpublished cases, the Appeals Court reduced a five-year sentence imposed by a trial judge to three years; in another case a two-year sentence was halved; in another a three-year term was cut to two.

The judge says the heaviest sentence he could recall ever being upheld by the Appeals Court was a 10-year term handed down to a man "with an atrocious criminal record".

He agrees those sentences are a long way off the maximum permitted under the law.

"It is probably a symptom of the times . . . our social direction is reflected in the sentences," he says.

But the muscle is still there if the courts choose to use it and, police officers like Insp. Trueit believe if more people were aware of the possible prison consequences, maybe . . . just maybe . . . there would be fewer house break-ins.

Oil Spill Plans Studied

Esquimalt taxpayers will spend $5,000 next year on equipment to fight oil spills if municipal council ratifies a recommendation by its public works committee.

An oil spill contingency plan drawn up by municipal engineer M. H. Campbell was presented committee members and approved at a meeting Monday.

Although both government and private industry try to avoid oil spills, "mishaps are inevitable despite the most stringent controls," said Campbell in the report.

"It is essential that Esquimalt have its own contingency plan for the protection of our waterfront and the clean-up of our shorelines should contamination occur," he said.

"The responsibility for combatting oil spills on the sea lies with the federal government." he said.

Equipment is available at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt to deal with spilled oil before it gets to the beaches.

"The place to fight oil spills is on the sea," said the report. "Once the oil reaches land the clean-up problem become very expensive and the results are not too successful."

The $5,000 worth of equipment proposed includes walkie-talkies, gloves, rope, chicken wire, gunny sacks, radar lights, a life raft and "Warning — Oil — Keep off Beach" signs.

Work Site Hinders Disabled

City aldermen indicated today there is nothing they can do to ease the problems of two handicapped employees of the provincial government, who are finding it difficult getting to and from work in the B.C. Hydro building on Blanshard.

The two employees used to have reserved spaces on the Hydro parking lot adjoining the building, but that land is now the construction site for a major extension to the building.

Robert Siddall, the architect for the project, suggested the city of Victoria allow part of the boulevard on the east side of the street to be asphalted as a special parking bay.

This would provide one parking space immediately outside the building and another across the sidewalk on the present boulevard area.

But the traffic and public works committee today recommended council turn down the proposal.

A report from traffic engineer Dave Campbell noted that granting permission in this instance would set an unfortunate precedent "by allowing vehicles to make special use of our landscaped boulevards for parking."

Apart from which, Campbell said, allowing the vehicles to back onto Blanshard could prove "hazardous."

Committee chairman Ald. Alf Hood suggested the solution is for the government department concerned to arrange for the employees to park in a regular parking lot as close to the building as possible, and then transport them to and fro.

Camosun Okays Budget Hike, Leaves Cut Up to Province

An operating budget for 1975-76 up 58 per cent over the current one was approved by Camosun College council onday with only one dissenting vote.

Council decided that if anyone should determine how much the $7.8 million budget must be cut, it should be the provincial government.

"I see this as the council's abdicating almost entirely this area of fiscal responsibility," said Bill Ross, who voted against the budget.

"We are going to become an anarchronism and a complete waste of time . . .," Ross warned. "We must submit a responsible budget."

"None of the other colleges are cutting their budgets," council chairman Dr. Hal Knight countered. "They're putting them in as they're prepared."

Other colleges have submitted budget increases ranging between 52 and more than 100 per cent, he said, so Camosun's increase isn't out of line "if tha's any comfort."

"It isn't," replied Ross.

He proposed an amendment to curb spending the non-vocational areas of the budget, but no one seconded the amendment.

Councillor Lavinia Greenwood proposed raising student fees from $125 to $150 per semester to provide more revenue, but her amendment was defeated.

Local taxes will have to raise $1.3 million of the approved budget, and that would hike the mill rate from the present 97 mills to more than 2 mills.

Ross asked how the four other school trustees on Camosun council could fight to control spending in the school board's provisional budget and not do the same for Camosun's.

"We do one thing in one area and over here we do exactly the opposite,' he said.

Knight pointed out that Greater Victoria School District has a declining enrolment, whereas Camosun's is expected to rise by 30 per cent next fall.

At the same meeting, council agreed to write Premier Dave Barrett, in his capacity of finance minister, urging reform of the budgeting system for community colleges.

Colleges like Camosun had to submit their provisional budgets for 1975-76 last June, compared with school boards who submitted theirs last month.

This month colleges must submit their final budgets, without knowing how much the provincial legislature will vote to allot to community colleges next spring.

ROY ROAD SEWER DELAYED

Paperwork has delayed a Saanich's decision on whether to increase its sewer system to make way for the proposed Roy Road subdivision.

The matter was to be debated at Monday's council meeting.

Mayor Ed Lum, however, said debate would have to be postponed until the next council meeting to allow the municipal staff to prepare the necessary papers.

Four years in the planning, Saanich acquired the Roy Road land with the intent of selling the lots at cost for single-family dwellings.

The provincial government, however, wants to have a mixture of townhouses and single-family dwellings.

The provincial government plans development on the ratio of 20 persons per acre while Saanich considers 6.4 persons per acre a "more realistic figure", according to Mayor Ed Lum.

To meet the provincial government density ruling, the sewer capacity in that area will have to be increased.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the largest member of the deer family? R.T.

A. The moose. It is larger than any deer that lived in past ages. Some animals grow 7½ feet high at the shoulder and weigh from 1,500 to 1,800 pounds. Moose are found on the mainland but not on Vancouver Island.

Q. Can you tell me which is Canada's largest province? B.T.

A. Quebec is the largest with 523,860 square miles; Ontario is second and B.C. third, but the Northwest Territories beats them all with a total of more than 1.2 million square miles.

Educator Dies After Accident

Bill Reid, superintendent of field personnel for the provincial education department, died Monday.

Reid, 58, of 2060 Frederick Norris Rd., had been in the Royal Jubilee Hospital undergoing treatment for injuries received in a boating accident Sept. 15.

Reid had been principal at Lansdowne junior secondary school and teacher and vice-principal at Esquimalt senior secondary school before joining the education department in 1956.

Born in Victoria, he attended Oaklands elementary school and Victoria high school and got his B.A. from the University of B.C.

He fought with the Seaforth Highlanders in the Second World War in Sicily and Italy, and after the war got his Masters degree from the University of Washington.

In 1960 he became district superintendent in Delta, and in 1964 returned to Victoria to become chief inspector of schools.

He is survived by his wife Milva, sons James of Victoria, William of Vancouver, and Robert, a University of Victoria student, and one daughter, Mrs. D. H. Wilson

All-Weather Pitch Plan

An all-weather soccer pitch is planned for the Cordova Bay area.

Mayor Ed Lum told Saanich council Monday the provincial department of highways has agreed to lease property, adjacent to the municipality's gravel pit, for $1 a year.

Family in Limbo Finds a Reprieve

Remember the Hickies?

What happens to a couple that buys a home for a 10-member family only to have it condemned as unfit to live in?

For more than two months, Everett and Georgina Hickie and their eight children have been living a nomadic existence, being moved from motel to motel as space became available. They cannot live in the house — on which they put a $2,000 down payment and took over payments on a furnace. They also bought assorted other fixtures.

Those weeks of being couped up in two motel rooms have taken their toll.

This week, the first ray of help has broken. They've been assigned a public housing unit.

It's too small for their family. They know it. But it's better than not knowing from day to day where they are going to be moved next.

But the father who's striven so hard to get a home together isn't there to help.

Plagued by worry, his health is broken. Everett Hickie was taken to hospital Sunday.

Since early October Hickie and his wife have tried to keep their worry from the children as much as they can — despite the family of 10 living in close quarters.

Hickie has seen his one-man construction business fail; customers going elsewhere when he couldn't meet commitments because of sessions with inspectors, other officials and lawyers.

In between an endless round of meetings, Hickie has had to find time to pick up his children, scattered around in three different schools as their address kept changing.

Stesss on the children has also taken its toll. One teenager is too worried to attend classes. Her teacher has advised she be kept out of school for a while.

Another child has been admitted into the Eric Martin Institute for care.

Both under doctor's care for weeks, her parents need pills to sleep. Sometimes, even these don't help. Mrs. Hickie is afraid to take too many. She took too many one night. It nearly proved fatal.

This week, however, she is the strong one in the family.

Day by day, she is moving her family's belongings, with the help of a friend.

Their money has run out so that the old truck the family uses can't get through the testing station. The friend is supplying transportation.

The housing unit isn't the solution to the Hickies' problem.

Eventually, the cramped quarters will also lead to more problems.

But, for now, it promises some sort of stability and that isn't something they've known since the hassle over the house began.

Small as it is, it will provide some semblance of the home they're denied — a temporary oasis after the harrowing weeks of indecision.

The home which is now denied them.

After 50 Years, Women in 'House'

Breaking tradition with both barrels, B.C. Youth Parliament opens Dec. 27 not only with girls taking part, but with a woman as lieutenant-governor.

Times columnist Bessie Forbes, a long-time advocate of women's rights, said today she was "surprised, delighted and honored on behalf of all women" who have persevered for equal opportunities, at being vhosen to open the Christmas holiday session.

"I've been fighting for 20 ears to add girls too the Older Boys' Parliament," Forbes remarked. When she was asked to be the first female lieutenant-governor, "it was sort of put up or shut up."

"But you can say I'm looking forward to it," she added.

Before retirement, Forbes was women's editor of the Times. She still writes a column three times a week.

Years before the female liberation movement blossomed, she urged the Older Boys' Parliament to admit girls and two years ago the assembly voted to reform and change its name.

Deputy premier Stephen D. Howell said, after 50 years of service the parliament had "undergone a facelift . . . and is eagerly awaiting the challenges of a second 50 years."

The move is part of an effort to broaden scope for the one-time church-oriented organization.

Members will represent the 48 electoral districts of the province, including dual-seat constituencies in Vancouver and the capital.

Members will be chosen from high schools, churches, universfties and youth organizations throughout the province.

With consent of the B.C. legislature, which is now sitting until late January, the youth parlament uses the legislative chamber and obseves the traditions of a real assembly.

They debate resolutions dealing with youth-oriented subjects and pass a "budget" covering the organization's own operating expenses.

Toronto Mayors Returned in Vote

Canadian Press

Toronto Mayor David Crombie and other incumbent mayors in Metropolitan Toronto's five boroughs were returned to office Monday in province-wide municipal elections.

Some 775 municipalities, including 32 cities, held elections — in many cases in snow, sleet or hail.

Storms hit most of the heavily populated southern part of the province, and reports indicated low voter turnouts.

Crombie was out-polling his nearest opponent, Western Guard Leader Don Andrews, by about 15 to 1. None of the 10 candidates in the field against Crombie was considered serious.

Lorry Greenberg, a six-year veteran of municipal politics, was elected mayor of Ottawa.

The 40-year-old former controller and alderman defeated his three opponents — Tom McDougall, a 32-year-old former controller; Stuart Langford, a 28-year-old law student; and Alphonse Lapointe, 50, a local businessman.

With 294 of 540 polls reporting, Greenberg had 19,577 votes compared with 16,827 for McDougall, 1,588 for Langford and 920 for Lapointe.

Greenberg replaces Pierre Benoit in the city's $40,000-a-year position. Benoit, who steps down Dec. 31, said he would not seek re-election as mayor after he entered the Ontario provincial by-election in the Carleton East riding. He lost as the Progressive Conservative candidate.

In Windsor, hit by a 14-inch snowfall Sunday and Monday, about 40 of the city's 445 polls will be open again today. The 1972 Municipal Elections Act requires polls to be open for nine consecutive hours. Because of the weather, some Windsor polls opened late. The act requires such polls to be open again today for nine consecutive hours.

Ontario Premier William Davis said the government should take a look at changing the date of municipal elections to a more seasonable time of the year.

CANTABILE SINGERS IN RECITAL

The Wednesday evening series of recitals at St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra at Mason Street, will feature the Cantabile Singers this week.

Directed by Madeline Groos, the ensemble was formerly known as the Occasional Singers.

Accompanist for the 8 p.m. recital will be Norman Hurrle.

Final event in the fall series will take place Tuesday, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m., when Edward Norman, organist of St. John's, will present a recital of Christmas music on the organ.

He will perform works by Bach, Daquin, Barber, Dupre and Messiaen.

Zoning Law Bent To Boost Taxes

SEVERSON
. . . prodding

In a bid to broaden the tax base, Saanich council will bend some of its rules for the Whittier Avenue area.

Prodded by Ald. Fred Severson Monday night, the council agreed a public hearing be held on an application from J. C. Switzer and Company Ltd. to have 3321-3323 and 3327 Whittier rezoned from single family to industrial.

The company wants to build a warehouse and office for its wholesale grocery distributing business.

Switzer's request was tabled Nov. 18 because the company was unable to get access from Tennyson.

(To preserve the residential area on Whittier, the municipality has ruled that industrial companies on that side of the street provide green belt areas and route their traffic away from Whittier on to Tennyson).

A letter from the company's solicitor Monday urged quick action because Switzer's time on acquiring the property is running out.

It said that Switzer was willing to pay 25 per cent of the cost of putting a cul-de-sac in off Tennyson and would close access from Whittier once a cul-de sac was established.

Severson, noting Saanich intended to allow industrial development to extend to the border of Whittier with three cul-de-sacs planned for Tennyson to divert the heavy traffic, accused Saanich of "falling behind."

He asked, "Are we going to stop business moving out until we're ready?"

Ald. Bill Campbell agreed Switzer should be allowed to go ahead, providing it met its commitments and Ald. Joseph Bourque conceded the firm's offer was "a reasonable compromise."

Mayor Ed Lum said he was in favor because it would broaden the tax base.

Ald. Les Passmore, Ald. Mel Couvelier and municipal planner Tom Loney were against allowing Switzer to go ahead at this time.

"I know it may cause temporary hardship in some cases," Couvelier said, "But unless we do force decisions in this manner decisions will not be made."

"There was a commitment, in my opinion, to the ratepayers. We gave assurance to the ratepayers that Whittier would not be cluttered with trucks," Passmore reminded council.

Loney said Switzer should be made to establish the green belt along its section of Whitter, as required, and wanted more time to study the cul-de-sac plans.

When it came to the vote Couvelier voted against the public hearing. Passmore abstained because he is leaving council in December. However, as he did not leave the council chamber, his abstention counted as a vote against the proposal.

Seniors Housing Approved

Oak Bay council Monday night gave the go-ahead to a major housing project for senior citizens but only after worrying aloud about the aesthetics of the seven-building complex.

Aldermen voted to proceed with a land-use contract for the 234-unit project, to be built by the B.C. Baptist Foundation on a site of almost three acres on Bee Street.

A motion to refer the design to an advisory committee was defeated after Ald. Douglas McLelland argued plans were essentially the same as those approved in principle by council earlier.

The housing is being largely funded with a $4 million loan from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. It is expected to be completed early in 1976.

Council was assured by architect William Wilding that exterior walls will be of brick, with plastic or metal-coated roofing, and it will not look "tackey."

In other business, council decided to gather public reaction to a proposal for a two-storey, eight-unit condominium on property at 1447 St. David St. Plans are on view at the municipal hall and neighbors will be asked their opinions.

Houseboat Disputes To Federal Gov't

West Bay Marina houseboat residents and Esquimalt residents who object to houseboats should take their complaints to the federal government, an Esquimalt council committee ruled Monday.

Aldermen said they can't deal with problems at the Head Street marina because the boats are outside municipal boundaries.

Foreshore property, below the high tide mark, belongs to the federal department of transport and is governed by its regulations it was pointed out.

As one Esquimalt resident told aldermen: "Your hands are tied till you get co-operation from the federal government."

But houseboat dweller Carl Smith asked aldermen, "Why can't council be the advance guard in the matter and propose a new law to the federal government?"

About 25 houseboaters attended the meeting along with four land-based residents who want the floating homes removed.

One of the four objected to the boats because they are "all different shapes and sizes," and another said they blocked her view.

Marina residents had come to the meeting thinking aldermen wanted the floating homes forcibly removed.

But Ald. Conrad Lundgren said, "I have nothing against floating homes. When I went down there I got a feeling of freedom and independence which the water brings.

"But this is the only marina in Esquimalt, and we need space for pleasure boats."

Ald. Terry Prentice agreed and said, "When we drew up plans for the marina, it was supposed to be for pleasure boats.

"There was no intention that boats such as are in there now should be there."

Prentice said he had no objection to the homes as long as council had a long-term method, in writing, of controlling their standard and taxation.

The two areas of concern, he said, is that houseboats can deteriorate and their owners do not pay municipal taxes although they use civic facilities.

CIA Cited in Jail-Break Aid

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency CIA staged a daring jail break in Rhodesia to free one of its agents, according to columnist Jack Anderson. Rhodesian authorities, according to Anderson, arrested an Englishman and a Scot who supplied the CIA with information about violators of the Rhodesia trade embargo. One man was an editor for the Rhodesia Herald in Salisbury and the other was a lawyer in private practice.

Anderson said the men gave details of their spying to authorities after they were beaten and tortured. The journalist was sentenced in 1969 to 18 months hard labor and the lawyer got four years.

The United States negotiated the release of one man, who was delivered to the airport while allegedly en route to prison, Anderson said, but "stubbornly refused to give up the other."

"The CIA, say our sources, freed him by staging a daring jail break, then whisked him off to a new life in another land."

McCarthy Mulling

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Former Senator Eugene McCarthy, a Democratic presidential candidate in 1968, said Monday he may run for president as an independent in 1976. Asked about financing a campaign, the former Minnesota senator said: "We don't contemplate running in primaries, which can be expensive.

'Time Wasted' At Conventions

Saanich aldermen want to spend more time discussing mutual problems with their counterparts in other "bedroom municipalities" when they attend Union of B.C. Municipalities conventions.

Ald. Mel Couvelier won support from most aldermen Monday night when he said too much time at the conventions is wasted debating redundant resolutions.

Couvelier said more time should be spent with leaders from such municipalities as Richmond, Surrey, Coquitlam and Delta.

"We should caucus separately," Ald. Fred Severson said.

Mayor Ed Lum said many delegates attending the UBCM meeting represented much smaller municipalities.

"We should be able to have more time with people from bedroom municipalities who have similar problems to our own," he said.

Ald. Sandy Noel said today resolutions, that often appear to be similar, are submitted for specific reasons, to meet individual problems of municipalities.

"These are experienced and dedicated people,' Noel said of the resolutions committee, "I wouldn't want to knock them."

SAANICH REJECTS TWO DUPLEXES

Saanich council Monday rejected two requests for permission to build duplexes because of possible deterioration of residential areas.

Both would have broken the municipality's ruling that no more than one duplex be allowed within a 600 feet radius.

The first was for a duplex at 3520 Maplewood, which already has five duplexes within the 600 feet radius.

The other was for a duplex at 49 Lurline, which has nine duplexes within the radius.

The council also granted approval to Rev. Leo Robert for a strata title subdivision of a duplex at 4074-4076 Cedar Hill.

ARCHITECTS APPOINTED

Lester and Peterson were appointed architects for Saanich's branch library, to be built at the corner of Cedar Hill and McKenzie, at Monday's council meeting.

The library will be the second to be built in Saanich and is planned to service the rapidly growing Gordon Head area.

The council also appointed newspaperman Edward Ward-Harris as a Saanich representative on the board of the Greater Victoria Public Library.

Ward-Harris replaces Brian Tobin, who has resigned.

80 Building Permits Granted

Eighty building permits, for construction worth $2,324,280, were taken out in Saanich in November.

Reflecting the increased costs of labor and materials, for the same period in 1973, 113 permits then represented an outlay of $1,276,505.

Two permits, for construction costing more than $50,000, were taken out this November. One was for a $1,116 service station addition at 3377 Douglas and the other, a $54,600 home at 4478 Emily Carr.

Thirty permits were taken out for single-family homes at a total value of $980,600, compared to 42 for a value of $1,087,250 in November of 1973.

Construction figures show an increase in single-family homes for the first 11 months of this year, compared to 1973.

This year, 1,196 permits have been taken out for a total value of $24,651,130, compared to 1973 when 1,137 permits were issued for a total value of $29,913,990.

Dutch Party

Those Victorians lucky enough to be invited to Dutch Sinterklaas' party after his arrival in town Saturday should gather at Holland House, 733 Vanalman Ave. about 3 p.m.

The party, staged by members of Victoria's Dutch community, is for children.

Sinterklaas will arrive to give gifts in a non-traditional way, by car, rather than on the white horse of legend.
